POLITIACL NOTES.

—John C. Knox, deputy Attorney General, has resigned.

—The Cincinnati Democracy have cut loose from the Cincinnati Liberals.

—It is reported that a movement is on foot at Harrisburg to establish a People's party.

—It is reported that the State Attorney General will carry the Evans case to the Supreme Court.

—Ex-President Andrew Johnson recently appeared as council in a lawsuit in a Tennessee justice's court.

—It is reported that a son of Joe Smith is about to start an anti-polygamy Morman establishment in Ohio.

—The Louisville Courier Journal, a Democratic paper, considers the Kentucky Legislature, which is Democratic, so bad that it wants it abated as a nuisance.

—According to the Philadelphia Press, the Pennsylvania Senate stands by the people and the House by the rogues.

—The "Pennsylvania Woman Suffrage Association" have appointed Miss Matilda Hindman, of Pittsburg, as their traveling agent for the State.

—Little Rhody remains true to her Republican colors. electing Howard Governor by about 6,000 majority. Now for Connecticut on Monday next.

—The Press of the country condemns unequivocally the meanness which, to save a few tons of coal, caused the destruction of the steamship Atlantic.

—The Iowa Pacific railroad is to be sold under execution, on a judgment obtained by Maurice Brown and George W. Mitchell, for $41.000, in a suit under the mechanics' lien law.

—The Roman Catholics are reported to be rapidly gaining ground in Kentucky, multiplying their schools, colleges and hospitals, and doing extensive work among the colored people.

—W. S. Pride, a correspondent of the Wilmington (Del.) Every Evening, was expelled by a large vote from the floor of the House of Representatives on the 27th ult., for criticising certain measures before the Legislature.

—Hon. F. H. Gowen, President of the Reading Railroad Company, and member of the Constitutional Convention, has been ordered to Florida for the benefit of his health. Overwork is the cause of his illness, and he needs rest.

—The Senate committee on the Mississippi levees will personally examine the river during the recess, and it is expected they will recommend that the General Government take charge of the levee system as a matter of national concern.

—The lower house of our Legislature has followed the base example set by Congress and voted its members $500 extra pay, but it is said that the Senate will refuse to concur. We hope so. Let Congress stand out alone in such miserable peculation.

—The United States is to have another distinguished foreign visitor; this time he will be King Lunaliho, of the Sandwich Islands, who wants to see for himself the workings of our Republicanism. This will be the first visit from an actual monarch while in power.

—It is feared in some quarters that political complications may arise in W. Virginia similar to those in Louisianna. Owing to the Legislation of last winter there may be two sets of Congressmen, two State Legislatures, and a double allowance of all the State officials.

—The exceeding liberality of Congressmen to themselves is in singular contrast with their parsimonious increase of the compensation of certain bureau officers, whose salaries were increased at the late session. The Congressional salaries were increased from $5,000 to $7,000, and to date back two years. Certain bureau officers' salaries were increased by the same act from $3,000 to 4,000, but not to take effect until the first of July next. The question is asked, if bureau officers can reside here all the year and support their families decently on $3,000 or $4,000, could not Congressmen support theirs on $5,000 when they live here but five months in the year?

CONGRESSIONAL THIEVES.

The salary bill passed in the closing hours of the late Congress, is being sharply discussed and criticised by the entire press of the country, and we have yet to hear of the first paper, no matter what its politics, that speaks of it approvingly. The more the matter is discussed the greater seems the enormity. Held up in the most favorable light, with all the excuses for the passage duly regarded, and it is still a shame and disgrace to the American Congress, and an unpardonable outrage upon the American people.

Ben. Butler has the disgraceful reputation of being the boss thief of them all. He is the man that was not made by the newspapers. We are thankful for that—tally one for the newspapers.

The paper or papers that could manufacture a man like that, might, in very truth, be called a corrupt and venal press. He has no need to deny the spoon story any longer. We can believe him guilty of even that, now, for his last great steal outweighs them all. Don't send us three cents, Ben., for we never lived in your district.

Although, as we are sorry to say, some Republicans were engaged in this steal, led on by Massachusetts' dishonored son, yet it was no party measure. If this sin could be brought home to any party, it would, as it should, bury it beyond the hope of resurrection.

Of those who voted for the bill in the House of Representatives, sixty-six were members whose terms were about to expire. Had there been a provision in the constitution of the United States, as there is in some States, providing that members shall not vote to increase their own pay, the bill would probably have been defeated, for the out-going members would have had little interest in the compensation of their successors. But as there is no such provision, those sixty-six members did not long hesitate between congressional dishonor and the possession of five thousand dollars each.

Those who were managing this iniquitous business, of whom noble Ben. was chief, did not dare to risk the bill on its own merits, fearing there might be virtue enough in Congress to defeat it, or in case of its passage, that the President would veto it. So it was tacked to an important appropriation bill as an amendment, and by this means worked through and received executive approval. We think the the country would have thanked the President if he had vetoed the bill, even at the expense of calling an extra session of Congress for the purpose of providing for the expenditures of government.

In the new Congress the sixty-six before spoken of, would have been powerless for mischief. It is that retroactive feature of the bill, which we are now considering, though we condemn the whole measure as being unjustifiable and extravagant. It is not the mere amount of money which this bill draws from the treasury for services already paid for that we complain of, though a million and a half of dollars is no small sum, but it is the principle involved.

If Congress can legally appropriate money and divide it among its members as this bill provides—just as a band of thieves would divide their plunder—is our treasury sufficiently guarded? Does it not disclose a defect which the people should demand should be speedily remedied? If this act of robbery can be made out to be legal, every out-going Congress has it in its power to rob the treasury of its last dollar.

To the rank and file of the Republican party, we say, let us do our duty in this matter. Let every man who voted for this great robbery be marked, so that all the world may know them as dishonest men who have betrayed the trust and confidence of the people.

——The new engine at the water works was put in motion yesterday. Now, let us have a good supply of water, let the reservoir be kept full and we will insure the town against loss by fire if the "dear people" will stand back and give the fire department a chance when such a calamity does befall us.

THE MARINE DISASTER!

FULL PARTICULARS OF THE HORROR!

Last week just as we were going to press, the news reached us of the loss of the steam-ship Atlantic with one thousand souls aboard, seven hundred and fifty of whom, including all the women and children, found a watery grave. We had only time to mention the fact in our last, below we give a full account of this terrible disaster.

HALIFAX, April 2.—This morning's papers publish accounts of the disaster yesterday to the steamer Atlantic, of the White Star Line. It is estimated that seven hundred and fifty lives were lost. The report of the loss was first regarded as a canard, put afloat on All Fool's day, and little regard was paid to it. Soon after, however, the particulars became known, and it was learned that the Atlantic had been wrecked on Meager's Rock, twenty-two miles west of Halifax, with one thousand souls on board. The terrible announcement caused horror throughout the community. Brady, the third officer of the Atlantic, says she had a full cargo of merchandise and a very large number of passengers. Very rough weather was experienced through the voyage, and on Monday, March 31, Captain Williams resolved to put into Halifax, being short of coal. Brady was asleep when the vessel struck, between twelve and two o'clock in the morning, and was thrown out of his bunk by the shock. The sea ran heavily and the deck was crowded with passengers. A life-boat was launched and the crowd rushed to occupy it, but had to be forced back. About twelve men and two women were put in, and he got in himself. Just at that moment the steamer fell over and sank. The life-boat and all on board was carried down and drowned, except Brady. The greater part of the steamer's passengers being in their rooms they were immediately drowned.

RUNNING IN FOR COAL.

NEW YORK, April 2.—A special from Halifax regarding the wreck of the steamer Atlantic says: It is understood that over seven hundred unfortunate passengers out of the one thousand on board, all women and children, were drowned. The first intimation received of the wreck was a rumor that an ocean steamer had gone ashore down the coast and that several lives had been lost. It was next ascertained that the Atlantic had attempted to make Halifax harbor, on her way from Liverpool to New York in consequence of a shortness of coal. A heavy gale prevailed at the time, so that as she neared the coast in hopes of sighting a light on Sambo Island, the vessel was resistlessly carried before the wind, and by a strong current that always prevails in that locality, right on to the shore, causing her to become a total wreck.

A TERRIBLE STORM.

Late last evening further details were obtained. It appears there were about fifty cabin passengers aboard, together with over nine hundred steerage passengers, so that with the crew the total number of souls aboard was over one thousand. During the passage across the steamer encountered very heavy weather but all was well till yesterday. About twelve o'clock Monday night the captain and officers believed they were making straight for Sambo light, but two hours later the vessel struck. The scene at that moment was terrible. The steamer bumped on the rocks two or three times and the heavy waves lifted her, showing that her doom was sealed. Scarcely had the first shock been felt than the passengers rushed from their berths in the cabin and sternage on to the main deck. The attempt was then made to cut away the boats, and one was soon filled with men and women. It was too late, however, for the steamer suddenly careened leaward, fell over on her beam ends, and almost immediately sinking, the boat mentioned being swamped, and going down with her.

LIVES SAVED BY A LINE.

So close to shore was the steamer when she struck, that several sailors succeeded in swimming ashore with a line after they had found themselves thrown into the sea. Fortunately the fishermen living on the coast was on the lookout, and they assisted the officer and his companions in hauling in a rope by means of the halyards they had so bravely carried ashore. By means of this line some two hundred and fifty men succeeded in getting safely to land.

THE NEWS IN NEW YORK.

The news received here last evening of the loss of the Atlantic struck terror to the hearts of all who heard it, but it was not until this morning that the terrible character of the calamity became fully public. The bulletin-board of every newspaper is surrounded by excited crowds, and sympathetic comment can be heard on every side. In the hotels great excitement prevailed among the guests many of whom had friends on the steamer. All details were eagerly sought for. Until a late hour last evening the company's employees at the wharf here had not received any information concerning the Atlantic. Among the cabin passengers of the Atlantic were Wm. H. Merrit and wife of New York, Miss Mary Merrit and Miss Annie Seymour. It will be some time before a list of those lost can be obtained.

THE LOSS PRINCIPALLY WOMEN AND CHILDREN.

A later dispatch received here by the agents of the White Star line, late last night, says two hundred and fifty passengers were safely landed. The sender does not believe the loss is quite so heavy as first reported. Another account says two hundred and fifty men managed to reach Meager's Head rocks safely, and the authorities of Halifax dispatched the steamer Lady Heard, and the Cunard line sent the Fardetta. These steamers saved about three hundred men. The greater proportion of those lost were women and children. Many of the dead were found on the steamer, which was slowly going to pieces. Some had been killed by falling spars; some by being crushed against hard substances, and others by being swept into the sea. It is stated the majority of the passengers were Norwegians, Swedes and Germans. This was the steamer's nineteenth trip.

DESCRIPTION OF THE LOST STEAMER.

The lost steamer Atlantic was built at Belfast, Ireland, 1871. She was four hundred and twenty feet long, forty feet beam, and twenty-three feet depth of hold, and registered 3,723 tons. She was constructed of iron, and had four masts and six water tight bulkheads. She was fitted with eleven boilers and four cylinders on the compound principle, under which the average consumption of coal was only forty-five tons. The disaster believed to be traceable to the carrying of an insufficient supply of coal for a voyage of more than ten or eleven days.

PENNSYLVANIA.

FIRE AT PARKER'S LANDING!

THE CITY IN RUINS!

Loss Estimated at $250,000.

THE WORK OF AN INCENDIARY!

PARKER'S LANDING, April 4.

A fire broke out about 9:30 o'clock last evening, destroying a large portion of our city. Smoke was first discovered issuing from the office of Farrar & Trefils, adjoining the Parker House.

The fire spread rapidly up and down the street on both sides, consuming about sixty buildings, including among the number the Parker House, Central Hotel, Exchange Bank, Savings Bank, Postoffice, Western Union and Pacific Telegraph offices, Union Pipe Line office, and a number of other offices, the most valuable portion of the town. The Wilson House was saved by the exertions of the men, who did nobly. The loss is estimated at $250,000, but will probably exceed that amount.

LATER.—1:45 A. M. The fire is under control, having burned up the street as far as the Morrison Block, and down to the Wilson House. It is supposed to be the work of an incendiary, it being the third fire within thirty-six hours in this city.

FIRE AT OIL CITY.

THE LOSS ESTIMATED AT $75,000.

OIL CITY, April 4.

A fire occurred here about 5:30 o'clock this morning in M'Mullin's block, which, despite the efforts of the firemen, spread to the adjoining buildings. The rapid progress of the flames soon enveloped a large amount of valuable property. The following buildings have been destroyed: Hicks & Co.'s liquor house; Downer's wholesale liquor house; Zarwiski & Co.'s clothing store; Stillwell & Co.'s wholesale grocery; While's saloon; Spangler's building, and two unoccupied stores. The total loss is estimated at $75,000; insured for $20,000.

SENTENCED TO BE HANGED.

PITTSBURG, April 4.

At Washington, Pa., the motion for a new trial in the case of Henry Braceland, convicted of the murder of John Allingham was overruled and Braceland was sentenced to be hung.

PIGEON HUNTING.—Bellefonte's sporting club was startled by the cry of "pigeons in the air!" Their reputation was place immediately at stake; their cupidity, avaricious appetite and epicurean tastes were appealed to; the sportive blood rose high and a council of war was immediately held among the sachems.

Wilkinson, the recognized leader of the sporting crew, being death on the wing, submitted an enthusiastic plan of general attack, that, if successfully carried out, must compass all the feathered tribe within a radius of ten miles. His enthusiasm inspired the rest, and, submitting the following resolution, it was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That we are at the mercy of public opinion, and, to preserve our reputation, must attack, on all sides, the hosts of pigeons that fill the air with their whir.

On call of the "yeas" and "nays" it was carried by a large majority, Messrs. Furst, Hoy, Yocum, Duncan, Malin, Wilkinson and Burnside voting in the affirmative.

The plan of the campaign being agreed upon, the attack was ordered at once.

The chief sachem—Wilkinson—appointed his various divisions, satisfied himself that they were armed cap-a-pie, and sent them forth to the conflict. Hoy and Furst took the right, Yocum the left, Malin rear and left, Wilkinson and Duncan took the centre, and Haupt and Foster played the role of guerillas.

During the day, the rattle of shot-guns was heard in every direction.—After a lively campaign, and as the shades of evening gathered, the various divisions returned with their trophies of victory.

The chief formed the council and called the roll.

Mr. Furst reported a lively campaign, and had bagged five birds. He was furious because Foster had made a score of eleven, and they were both chagrined to find that Haupt, with no gun or ammunition, but a small quantity of salt, had taken sixty-seven.—Mr. Hoy reported that a flock was seen in the tops of some oaks, and, by bringing his well known strategy into play, deployed on the sly. His approach to the locality of the flock was being most stealthily and skillfully performed, when a twig (naughty thing) caught his boot, and—well the underbrush made such a crashing noise that the birds winged themselves out of danger.

Mr. Yocum saw a congregation of them trying to telescope each other, was sure they were pigeons or meadow larks, and, passing a ravine, at the bottom of which was a morass, he scented them in the pampas beyond, but couldn't get a shot. Malin came forward, unstrung his wampum and deposited at the feet of the chief, six of the feathery tribe. Out of the most respectful sympathy we refrain from further reports. Let it suffice to say that the tribes of pigeons still wing themselves with graceful ease and defiant mein over the very heads of our sportsmen.

——An incendiary turned the cow out of Thomas Twitmyre's, stable on last Monday night and started a fire in one of the stalls. An alarm was sounded and the flames were extinguished before any serious damage was done. It appears that the "match committee" is still around.

——A man named Thomas Smith, of Snow Shoe had his foot cut last week. He was chopping in the woods, and a mis-stroke caused the axe to glance from its course and lodge in his foot, severing it at the instep. The unfortunate man suffered several hours before medical aid could be obtained.

AN old woman, on being examined before a magistrate as to her place of legal settlement, was asked what reason she had for supposing her husband had a legal settlement in that town. The old lady said: "He was born and married there, and they buried him there; and if that isn't settling him there, I don't know what is."

—Philadelphia claims to have 3,000 more dwelling houses than New York and Brooklyn, and it is not for lack of area that these two cities have together failed to equal Philadelphia. The average number of persons to a house is also higher in Philadelphia than in London, with its 770,000 houses. The average in the former place is 6.01 persons to a house, and the average in London is not more than 5 to a house. In New York the average is 14.72; in Brooklyn, 8.64; St. Louis, 7.84; Chicago, 6.70. It is melancholy to read in the census, however, that Philadelphia has 42,000 persons who cannot read and write.

WILL THE NEW YEAR COME TO-NIGHT MAMMA?

BY C. M. F.

Will the New Year come to night, mamma?
I'm tired of waiting so—
My stockings hung by the chimney side full three long days ago!
I run peep within the door by morning's early light—
'Tis empty still; oh say, mamma, will the New Year come to night!
Will the New Year come to night, mamma;—
The snow is on the hill,
And the ice must be two inches thick upon the window's sill.
I heard you tell papa, last night, his son must have a sled.
(I didn't mean to hear mamma), and a pair of skates, you said.

I prayed for just such things, mamma, Oh, I shall oe full of glee,
And the orphan boys in the village school will all be envying me;
But I'll give them toys, and lend them book's and make their New Year glad,
For God, you say, takes back his gifts when little folks are bad.
And won,t you let me go,mamma, upon the New Year's day,
And carry something nice and warm to poor old widow Gray?
I'll leave the basket near the door, within the garden gate—
Will the New Year come to night, mamma!—
it seems so long to wait.
* * * * * * * * *

The New Year comes to-night, mamma, I saw it in my sleep:
My stocking hung so full, I thought—mamma
what mades you weep?—
But it only held a little shroud—a shroud and nothing more;
And an open coffin, made for me, was standing on the floor!
It seemed so very strange, indeed, to find such gifts instead
Of all the toys I wished so much—the storybooks and sled;
And while I wondered what it meant, you came with tearful joy,
And said. "Thou,it find the New Year first;
God calleth thee, my boy!"

It is not all a dream, mamma - I know it must be true;
But have I been so bad a boy, God taketh me from you?
I don't know what papa will do, when I am laid to rest—
And you will have no Willie's head to fold upon your breast.
The New Year comes to night, mamma—your
dear hand on my cheek,
And raise my head a little more—it seems so hard to speak.

I shall not want the skates, mamma I'll never need the sled;
But won't you give them both to Blake, who hurt me on my head?
He used to hide my books away, and tear the pictures, too,
But now he'll know that I forgive as then I tried to do.
And, if you please, mamma, I'd like the story-book's and slate
To go to Frank, the drunkard's boy, you wouldn't let me hate;
And dear mamma, you won't forget, upon the
New Years day,
The basketful of something nice for poor old
widow Gray?

The New Year comes to-night, mamma, it seems so very soon—
I think God didn't hear me ask for just another June.
I know I've been a thoughtless boy, and made you too much care,
And may be for your sake, mamma, God doesn't hear my prayer.
There's one thing more: my pretty pets, the robin and the dove.
Keep for you and dear papa, and teach them how to love.
The garden rake, the little hoe- you'll find them nicely laid Upon the garret floor, mamma, the place where last I played,

I thought to need them both so much when summer comes again,
To make my garden by the brook that trickles through the glen:
It can not be but you will keep the summer flowers green.
And plant a few—don't cry, mamma—a very few
I mean.
Where I'm asleep—I'll sleep so sweet beneath the apple-tree,
Where you and robin, in the morn, will come and sing to me.

The New Year comes—good night mamma—"I lay me done to sleep.
I pray the Lord"—tell dear papa—"my soul to keep;
If I"—how cold it seems—how dark—kiss me, I cannot see—
The New Year come to-night mamma, the old year dies with me.

Our Story Teller.

THE MORTGAGE.

There was a grave looking group that gathered in Dean Lindsay's best room that lovely June morning. First there was Dean Lindsay himself, always a prominent feature anywhere, from his tall muscular form, bold, resolute face.—At his right, their elbows leaned on the table, whereon lay writing materials with sundry folded and crossed papers, sat two men, one of them idly toying with a pen which he held in his hand. He was a slight, dark-skinned man, with short, bushy hair and whiskers—the latter of the mutton-chop style—and both of them the color denominated as pepper and salt. He had a bright alert face, and clear, bluish gray eyes, and his name was Mark Seldon, and his calling, attorney at law.

The man at his side offered the strongest possible contrast. He was tall and loosely built, with a slight stoop in his heavy shoulders. He had a florid complexion, with small sleepy-looking pale-blue eyes, a beardless face, and long, lank, sandy hair, pushed behind his ears, said ears being modeled on a generous plan, as regarded size, and if I may use the expression, placed in the most favorable possible light to show advantageously.—And as he carried his head a little down, they gave him the appearance of listening covertly, without seeming interested.—This man's name was Wilson—Amos Wilson, and though you might not think it from his dress or general appearance, a rich man. I mean, of course, rich for his locality. He might not have been rich for New York, but for Dalton, a small western township, he was a perfect Crœsus.

Besides those, there was a colony of young Lindsays, in assorted sizes, the largest of whom, pretty Della Lindsay, stood behind her mother's chair, her arm thrown over her shoulder in a pretty protecting way. Mrs. Lindsay had been an invalid since Harry's birth, four years, and Della was practically at the head of the household. It was, moreover, no light thing to be at the head of the household. There were, besides herself, seven children, which with her father and mother and Paul Leicester, who had been with her father for the summer, just eleven in the family. Added to this was the care of a dozen cows, and added to the fact that the state of their finances would not admit of their keeping a servant. And this question of finances brings me to the real subject of my story.

"You'll excuse me, Wilson, for being a little down-hearted about this thing," Mr. Lindsay said, with a faint, deprecating smile. "It seems like signing away my heart's blood to give a stranger a claim on the old homestead!"

A slow red burned itself through Amos Wilson's cheek. "I wish you wouldn't speak of me as a stranger," he said hastily, with an involuntary glance at Della, which no one but Paul Leicester saw.

"I meant any one not a relative, Mr. Wilson," replied Lindsay soberly. "You know I had hope of help from my cousin in New Orleans. I mentioned it to you."

Mr. Wilson listened and nodded thoughtfully.

"Well, the fact that I have applied to you shows that hope has failed me, and so we'll say nothing more about it. Perhaps you had better write the deed now, Mr. Seldon."

Mr. Seldon bowed pleasantly, dipped his pen in the ink, and for a while the faint scratch of the pen on the paper, and the loud ticking of the kitchen clock, were the only sounds in the house.

Mr. Lindsay leaned his face on his hand and looked steadily on the floor, the slight twitching of the muscles about the mouth being the only sign of emotion one could discover. Mrs. Lindsay, white and still as a statue, her face a little drooping, sat a few feet at the left of her husband, while Della retained her old position by her mother's chair, a troubled shadow in her soft brown eyes, and over the sweet young face. Harry, awed and perplexed, hid his face in the folds of her dress, while in a group at the open window were gathered the rest of the children.

How unnaturally still it was. How in contrast to the freshness and brightness of the sky and air! Looking from the open windows one saw long reaches of softly undulating prairie bathed in golden light, while away to the right, a blue, sparkling river, sentineled with cotton-woods and sycamores, and overhung with pale, translucent mists, flashed and rippled between its velvety banks.

No wonder Dean Lindsay shrank from the thought of his fair heritage being compromised; but there was no help for it, and he had got to make up his mind to think of it as no longer really his, but subject to Amos Wilson's authority. He could hardly keep from groaning aloud as he ran over in his mind the half score or more of fine farms which belonged to Wilson, all of which had first been mortgaged to him, as his was being now, to raise the necessary money to keep them from being given up altogether. And then, one after another, they had been given up, and Amos Wilson was the possessor. Would his go in the same way? Would there be a few years of struggle with ill-luck—blight, and drouth, and mildew—and then his wife an children be homeless? He started with a nervous shudder and glanced up. Amos Wilson was leaning a little forward, looking steadily at Della with a strange fire lighting his sleepy eyes.

"The deed is ready for your signature, Mr. Lindsay," Seldon, said, briskly, "yours and Mrs. Lindsay's,"

His voice broke the wierd spell which had seemed to hold them, and Paul Leicester got up from his seat by the kitchen door, and came and stood by the table while the deed was signed, and the money, seven hundred dollars—counted out and given to Mr. Lindsay, who in turn, handed over the mortgage of the homestead to Mr. Wilson. Then he turned abruptly and went out. Mr. Seldon looked after him with his quick, bright eyes, but no one else appeared to notice it as being anything unusual that a hired man should intrude his presence upon such an occasion.

And now that business is over, I will take the opportunity of saying a word about this same Paul Leicester.

First, he was a stranger in Dalton; that is, he had been there but little over two months, having come early in April. He had seemed so anxious for employment, and offered to work so cheaply withal, and upon such easy terms—not asking payment until Christmas—that Mr. Lindsay had thought it best to take him. He could not work the large farm alone and was specially anxious to do a good deal this season, to try to recover himself.

Mr. Leicester was not very much used to farm work, it was quite evident, but he was so ready to learn, and so quiet and persistent about everything he undertook, that Mr. Lindsay was delighted with his bargain. He was extremely reticent at first, but by degrees he had grown more free, and once or twice surprised them with such a genial flow of wit and spirits that Mr. Lindsay had declared he was unable to see what sent him there, a man of his abilities.

And now a word in regard to Mr. Lindsay's embarrassments. For three consecutive seasons the harvests had been extremely light in this section, scarcely paying for the outlaying of money and labor, to say nothing of profit. Then the expenses of living was considerable, for ten persons required no small amount of food, to make no mention of garments that will wax old. Added to this was a long and severe illness, lasting all winter, and running him behind to such an extent that he saw no other way to go on with his work than to hire money. This it was next to impossible to do, and after some pretty severe struggles with his pride, he so far overcame it as to write to Julian Richardson, a second cousin, living in New Orleans, and reputed very wealthy. He had never seen him, but had heard that he was unmarried, and somewhat eccentric. And so in this straight, he ventured to appeal to him.—He wrote the first letter in February, but it was unanswered. After waiting in a state of nervous anxiety and suspense two or three weeks, he wrote again.—This time the letter was returned, after being opened, but without a line or word in answer. He struggled along a month or two more, and then he went to see Amos Wilson, with the final result I have beretofore described.

The days slipped away like golden sands, and the summer grew in beauty and brightness to Della Lindsay. The sunshine fell into her heart as softly as it capped the green, blossomy hills. The daily drugery of toil became suddenly lightened and illuminated by this same golden glow, and the world grew dear, and life looked only a sweet and beautiful dream.

Into this supreme atmosphere one day a sudden cloud broke. It had been no larger than a man's hand, for weeks she had not discovered it, and was, therefore totally unprepared for the great darkness that came upon her. She had returned from a long ramble over the prairie, her hands loaded with blossoms, and stood by the door describing their names and habits to Paul Leicester, whose grave face was softened into a rare, tender smile, whenever the pretty brown eyes and wild rose cheeks were lifted to his face.

"Della, my dear, I want you a moment," her father said coming out into the entry.

Without a word she followed him in, the blossoms still in her hands, and some of them dropping to the floor as she walked.

"Come in this way, my child," Mr. Lindsy said, passing before her and opening the door into the parlor, where sharply outlined against the sunset sky stood Amos Wilson, his back to the window, and his great ungainly form showing in bold relief against the light.

Somehow the feeling of depression which had so weighed her down on the day the homestead was mortgaged, came upon her again, and she felt the color leaving her face, snd felt her face grow white and rigid.

Mr. Lindsay closed the door carefully and came forward to his daughter's side.

"Della" he said, struggling to appear calm, "Mr. Wilson has done me the honor to ask permission to pay his court to my daughter. I have told him that my girl is free to answer for herself—what shall it be, Della?"

Della cast one quick glance into her father's face, and saw all its eager hope and anxiety. Then she turned to Amos Wilson, who had taken a step forward and was looking at her sharply from under his low brows, his pale eyes burning with faint opaline tints. Involuntarily she shuddered and drew back.

"I do not love Mr. Wilson, father," she said faintly.

"But you can learn to love him, Della?" he asked quickly, his lips twitching nervously.

"No, father, I cannot," she answered, this time firmly. "I thank Mr. Wilson for the honor he has done me, but I do not love him, and you do not ask me to marry a man I do not love, father?"

"No, my child I do not ask that," he said gently, but with a chord of sadness and disappointment in his voice.

Poor Della! how suddenly the cloud had descended and enveloped her. With heavy heart she crept softly out and left the two men together. She knew what her refusal had meant to her father. She knew the load which chafed and fretted him so might have been lifted with a simple movement of her lips, and yet she had not given it—she could not give it! Dropping her blossoms as she went, she hurried out to a little arbor of wild vines in the garden, and there, alone with the pitying twilight and the stars, she sobbed out the first bitterness of her regret and pain. She heard Mr. Wilson come out and go away, and then, a little after, heard a step in the garden—a step that sent the blood in a fierce, sudden torrent to her heart, and then to her cheeks.

"You are not repenting so soon, Della!" and Paul Leicester came and took the wet flushed face between his cool palms tenderly.

"Oh, I could'nt marry that man; why, why should he ever think of such a thing?" Della asked, pitifully. "And father—" She stopped abruptly, but he felt how hot her cheeks grew have said.

"He is rich, little Della."

"I know it," said Della, with a little choking sob.

"And I am only your father's laborer, and yet I have dared to love the same lady. What do you suppose he will say to my persumption, if she refuses this rich man so cavalierly?"

"You? O—O, Mr. Leicester! Don't mock me!" She broke down in another flood of tears, and Mr. Leicester comforted her with a great many fond words which would not look half so delightful and charming in print as they really were from the fact that certain things are universally pronounced silly, unless one happens to be one of the dramatis personæ—then they are better and more to be desired than the wisdom of Solomon.

By and by it grew chilly, and the damp mists came up from the river, and Mr. Leicester said Della must go in though she, foolish child, would have tarried there gladly, nor thought of damp or chill, if it had been January instead of August, if he was only here.

"I want to see your father, too, Della," he said; and so they went in.

Mr. Lindsay sat by the kitchen table, his arms crossed and leaning on it, and before him, scattered about, sundry bills, papers, etc. He looked up, then made a motion to gather them up. Mr. Leicester drew Della's arm through his, and came quickly forward.

"Mr. Lindsay, I love your daughter and she loves me," he said in a steady, assured voice. "I know Mr. Wilson would be more acceptable to you, but I think you are too much of a gentleman to object to me on property grounds. I think we can manage to live—Della and I—somehow. What do you say to us!"

Mr. Lindsay glanced from the radiant, blushing face of his daughter, to the strong, quiet one beside her, and, though it cost him a little effort, he cheerfully:

"I will add my blessing, if that is what you ask. God knows that my child's happiness is more to me than money—a thousand times."

Paul Leicester's face softened into a rare smile. You are a brave man, Dean Lindsay," he said warmly, his eye kindling, "and you shall never be sorry for having trusted me."

Mr. Leicester begged for an early wedding day, and soon won Della to his side by his eloquence and presistence. "It was as well, perhaps, now as at any time," Mr. Lindsay thought and also yielded. And Mrs. Lindsay had too long leaned upon and deferred to Della to think of objecting to any thing she asked; and so it was arranged for the last week in September. Two weeks before the time, Mr. Leicester said it would be necessary for him to be away a week, and without mentioning his destination, took his departure. The week passed, and then ten days, and he neither came or wrote to them. And then it lacked but one of the day fixed for the wedding, and Della grew nervous and Mr. Lindsay angry. But the afternoon brought the truant, who with a bright smile, said he was delayed by business.

"By the way," he added, taking a folded paper from his pocket, and tossing it to Mr. Lindsay, "I saw Mr. Wilson as I came along."

"The mortgage deed!" exclaimed Lindsay, looking perplexed.

"Yes. Its no more than fair I should make you some present when you have so generously giving me this dear girl," putting his arm about Della.

"But I don't understand. I—I—"

"Thought I was a poor fellow," finished Leicester, smiling. "I know you did, and I will add that I have been to considerable trouble to give you that impression,—learning farming, for instance! Do you remember that Dean?" he asked abruptly, tossing a letter he had written to his cousin in New Orleans.

Mr. Lindsay rose to his feet, white and trembling.

"You are not he—you are not Julian Richardson!" he gasped.

"I am very much afraid I am that eccentric personage," he replied, laughing, "I believe I was christened Julian Paul Richardson. When I received your letter, I conceived the idea of visiting you incog. Your second letter determined, and I must confess I am thoroughly delighted at the success of my experiment, he added with a bright smile upon Della, who clung to his arm, pale with wonder and excitement.

"You see, Dean, I desired to know if you were worth helping—it's a foolish hobby of mine always—and there was no other practicable way. I think we'll not trouble Mr. Wilson again, my good cousin! For, as I told you once before, I think we can manage to live some way—Della and I—can we not—my darling?"

And for answer Della hid her face on his shoulder and cried, woman fashion.

Steady Work Beneficial.

As a rule, we should say that the complaints of overwork are amongst the most flimsy of all the excuses got up by men for the evils which they bring upon themselves. Very few people really work hard, and when they do it generally agrees with them. Directly or indirectly, idleness does fifty times as much mischief, for the best cure for the love of excitement is steady application. A vast amount of good piety is thrown away in the world; and, instead of solemnly warning our friends not to do too much, we should find it simpler to refuse the indirect compliment for which they are manœuvring, and advise to relax their minds by a little strenuous activity. When the danger really exists, it may generally be remedied rather by redistributing the burden than by diminishing it. A very light physical exertion may injure a man for life, if he undertakes it in the wrong way. Try to lift a thousand pounds by a sudden jerk, and you may probably break a blood vessel; divide the weight into ten portions, and lift each calmly by itself, and the exercise may do you good. Run a mile after eating a hearty meal, and you may be injured for life; walk ten miles a day and you materially improve your health. The same principle is applicable to intellectual labor. To lay down any general rule is impossible, because constitutions vary indefinitely. One man requires twice as much sleep as another; one man can do work before breakfast when another finds it better to sit up at night; and so on. A few practical rules will be learnt by practice. The Lancet, for example, in a sensible paper on the subject, remarks upon the importance for men who work at night of having a white, powerful, and steady light concentrated upon their papers; flickering and diffused light being one of the most serious causes of brain irritation. The rule is, that a man should take care to get good sleep and keep his digestion in order. A little unprejudiced observation of his own symptoms will teach a man of ordinary sense how to keep himself in health, and by a judicious arrangement of his time and habits, he will find that he can do as much work with perfect impunity as well as will serve him, if he so pleases, with an admirable excuse for committing suicide and becoming a text of leading articles. It is not overwork that should be denounced, but the bad habits for which work is made to serve as an excuse. Eat too much, drink too much, and do everything in a hurry and at a wrong time, and five hours a day may send you to an early grave. Show a little common sense and without injuring your health you may be as voluminous an author as Voltaire, or do as much legal or official work as the most industrious minister or barrister of the day, and see your children's children and laugh at the degeneracy of the rising generation in the twentieth century.

Only a Revolver.

The following incident is said to have occurred in a Utica restaurant: A man recently entered the place and ordered a very elaborate dinner. He lingered long at the table, and finally wound up with a bottle of wine. Then lighting a cigar he had ordered, leisurely sauntered up to the counter, and said to the proprietor:

"Very fine dinner, landlord; just charge it to me; I haven't got a cent."

"But I don't know you," said the proprietor, indignantly.

"Of course you don't. If you had you wouldn't let me had the dinner."

"Pay me for the dinner, I say!"

"And I say I can't."

"I'll see about that," said the proprietor, who had snatched a revolver out of a drawer, leaped over the counter and collared the man, exclaiming, as he pointed it at his head, "Now see if you'll get away with that dinner without paying for it, you scoundrel."

"What is that you hold in your hand?" said the impecunious customer, drawing back.

"That, sir, is a revolver, sir."

"Oh, that a revolver, is it? I don't care a fig for a revolver; I thought it was a stomach-pump!"

Hard on the Engineer.

An engineer on the Ohio and Mississippi Railroad tells the following story of himself. One night the train stopped to wood and water at a small station in Indiana. While this operation was going on I observed two green-looking countrymen, in "home-spun," curiously inspecting the locomotive and occasionally giving vent to expressions of astonishment. Finally one of them looked up to me and said:

"Stranger, are this a locomotive?"

"Certainly! Didn't you ever see one before?"

"No, haven't never saw one afore.—Me'n and Bill come down to the station to-night purpose to see one. Them's the feller, ain't it?"

"Yes, certainly."

"Wat yer call that you're in?"

"We call this the cab."

"And that big wheel?"

"That's the driving wheel."

"That big black thing on top is the chimbley, I suppose?"

"Precisely."

"Be you the engineer what runs the machine?"

"I am the engineer."

"Bill," said the fellow to his mate, after eyeing me closely for a few minutes, "it don't take much of a man to be engineer, do it?"

"All aboard!"

Cruelty to Animals.

The New Orleans Picayune gives the following:—"A man had been arrested for accidentally striking a passenger with his whip in a street car. The stroke was evidently meant for the mule, but the lash was too long, and came in contact with the complainant's shoulders. When the case was called up, an attorney moved to dismiss the case on the ground that it was not assault, because unintentional, and there was no law to cover it. The magistrate took issue with him, and fined the offending driver under the statute relating to cruelty to animals.

"But, my dear sir!" exclaimed the astonised lawyer, "you can't do that."

"But I have done it."

"Yes, I know, but there is a mistake."

"How so?"

"The complainant is no animal."

Another lawyer, seeing the judge's perplexity, suggested that the driver might be a brute.

"Yes," exclaimed the elated disciple of Eldon, "he's a brute—I fine him for that!"

A BOY'S IDEA OF HEADS.—Heads are of different shapes and sizes. They are full of notions. Large heads do not always hold the most. Some persons can tell just what a man is by the shape of his head. High heads are the best kind. Very knowing people are called long headed. A fellow that won't stop for anything or anybody is called hot-headed if he is not quite so bright they call him pig-headed. Animals have very small heads. The heads of fools slant back. When your head is cut off you are beheaded. Our heads are all covered with hair, except bald heads. There are other kinds of heads besides our heads. There are barrel heads, heads of sermons—and some ministers used to have fifteen heads to one sermon; pin heads; heads of cattle; as the farmer calls his cows and oxen; head wind; drum-heads; cabbage heads; at loggerheads; come to a head like a boil; heads of chapters; head him off; head of the family; and go ahead—but first be sure you are right.

Moral and Religious.

MORE GOOD THAN BAD.

There is many a rest in the road of life,
If we would only stop to take it;
And many a tone from the better land,
If the querulous heart would make it!
To the soul that is full of hope,
And whose beautiful trust ne'er falleth,
The grass is green and the flowers are bright,
Though the winter storm prevaileth.

Better to hope, though the clouds hang low,
And to keep the eye still lifted;
For the sweet blue sky will soon peep through,
When the ominous clouds are rifted!
There never was night without a day,
Or an evening without a morning;
And the darkest hour, as the proverb goes,
Is the hour before the dawning.

There is many a gem in the path of life,
Which we pass in our idle pleasure,
That is richer far than the jeweled crown,
Or the miser's hoard of treasure;
It may be love of a little child,
Or a mother's prayer to heaven,
Or only a beggar's grateful thanks
For a cup of water given.

Better to weave in the Web of life,
A bright and golden filling,
And to do God's will with a ready heart,
And hands that are ready and willing,
Than to snap the delicate minute threads
Of our curious lives asunder,
And then blame Heaven for the tangled ends,
And sit and grieve and wonder.

SUNDAY READINGS.—No. 9.

My peace I give unto you.—JOHN.

What is this peace which Christ gives unto his faithful followers? Surely it relates not to out-ward circumstances, for previously he had declared that he did not come to give peace on earth, but rather division. This was the inevitable consequence of the teachings with which he endeavored to displace the Roman's faith in idol gods and to add to the Jews' ancient worship the purer doctrines it was his mission to inculcate.

We can readily imagine what divisions must have taken place in families when one or more forsook the synagogue to follow the lowly Nazarine. What a contrast between the magnificent Temple with its imposing ceremonies, and Jesus by the grave of Lazarus, or speaking to the multitude upon the hill side. To us that hill-side, roofed by skies and clouds, traversed by God's unseen ministers the winds, carpeted by Him with living green, is beyond measure the nobler and sublimer of the two. Jesus showed us there how superior to all circumstances true worship may become, since it is only from the heart that true worship can ascend.

Many, perhaps most of those who first listened to Jesus must have been influenced by idle curiosity; others probably had sought him to appease an undying thirst that Judaism had failed to allay. Born and nurtured in the Jewish faith and observant of its forms, they had failed to find peace, and

WISHART'S PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL,

NATURE'S GREAT REMEDY

FOR THE

Throat & Lungs.

It is gratifying to us to inform the public that Dr. L. Q. C. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial, for Throat and Lung Diseases, has gained an enviable reputation from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast, and from thence to some of the first families of Europe, not through the press alone, but by persons throughout the States actually benefitted and cured at his office. While he publishes less, so say our reporters, he is unable to supply the demand. It gains and holds its reputation—First. Not by stopping cough, but by loosening and assisting nature to throw off the unhealthy matter collected about the throat and bronchial tubes, which causes irritation.

Second. It removes the cause of irritation (which produces cough) of the mucous membrane and bronchial tubes, assists the lungs to act and throw of the unhealthy secretions, and purifies the blood.

Third. It is free from squills, lobelia, ipicac and opium, of which most throat and lung remedies are composed, which allay cough only, and disorganize the stomach. It has a soothing effect on the stomach, acts on the liver and kidneys, and lymphatic and nervous regions, thus reaching to every part of the system, and in its invigorating and purifying effects it has gained a reputation which it must hold above all others in the market.

CLASSIFICATION OF LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES OF THE U. S.

MR. EDITOR:—It is doubtless still fresh in the minds of your readers, the effort the Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York made near the end of the year 1872, to reduce the rates of insurance, but had to relinquish for the time being only, on account of the earnest requests of all the second, third, fourth and fifth classes of Mutual Life Insurance companies of the United States, who were under the impression that they would have to quit business, or at least a large number of them would have been compelled to have reinsured their risks. If the Mutual Life of New York had succeeded in reducing the rates as it proposed, say from 15 to 25 per cent., and still be a mutual company, and declare larger dividends than many of the lower class of mutual life companies are now doing with the present high rates charged.

During the time the Mutual Life of New York had this reduction of rates under consideration, it was widely discussed among Life Insurance men, Actuaries, Bankers and all classes of other financiers, what other Mutual Life companies would be able to reduce their rates with the New York Mutual, and still declare dividends and protect their policy holders, and there has been a general concurrence that all mutual life companies could have joined the Mutual Life of N. Y. in reducing their rates where their ratio of gross expenses to gross receipts did not exceed 12 per centum, and then have a surplus to protect their policy holders, fully ONE MILLION OF DOLLARS.

And it is further concurred by these leading financiers that such companies should be presented to the insuring public, as first class companies.

And we may very justly continue this classification on a duo-decimal system, and those other mutual life companies whose ratio of gross expenses to gross receipts are between 12 and 24 per centum, should rightfully belong to the second class companies, and those whose ratios are found between 24 and 36 per centum belong to third class, and so on at a duo-decimal ratio. And according to this system, the undersigned has thought proper to present to the insured and insuring public of Bellefonte and vicinity, the following classification of Life Insurance companies, carefully taken from the official tables from the report of the Massachusetts Insurance Commissioner for the year 1872, and by this classification enable the policy-holders of Centre county to determine what class of companies they are insured in; also to direct those about to insure where they ought to insure. And, Mr. Editor, as Life Insurance is fast becoming an important part of our Finance, these official reports should appear in our county papers often, so as to direct the Life Insurance Ships to the right port.

Hence we have the following classification according to the above rule:

FIRST CLASS COMPANIES.

Mutual Life Insurance Co. of N. Y., Connecticut Mutual, Mutual Benefit of Newark, N. J., New England Mutual, Ætna, of Hartford, New York Life and the Penn Mutual.

SECOND CLASS COMPANIES.

Charter Oak, Northwestern Mutual, Manhatten, Knickerbocker, Equitable Life Association of the U. S., Mass. Mutual, Home Life, Provident Life, North America, Washington, Security, John Hancock Mutual, Germainia, New Jersey Mutual and several others.

THIRD CLASS COMPANIES.

Metropolitan, N. Y., Continental, N. Y., Continental, Hartford, Eclectic, American Popular, Asbury, Brooklyn, Globe Mutual, Government Security, Guardian Mutual and several others.

FOURTH CLASS COMPANIES.

Anchor Life, Empire State, Hartford Life and Annuity, Merchants', National Capitol and a few others.

A rule how to find a good Life Insurance company: Go to the office of any good Life Agent, and ask him for a copy of the New York or Massachusetts Official Life Insurance Report—pay no attention to what may be said to you by any one about any particular company; but examine the official report yourself, (and be sure that the report is official), and when you find a company whose ratio of expense to income smallest, gross assets largest, and with the largest surplus as regards policy-holders, ask the agent to obtain a policy for you at once in this company, and when you invest in such a company you make the best legitimate investment that can be made in the United States.

PENN'A AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE FARM.

We copy with great pleasure the following communication written by Tobias Martin, one of the largest and most successful fruit growers in the State. He arrives at just such conclusions as any reasonable and sensible man will arrive at who goes to the college and examines its management and progress with anything of desire to arrive at the truth.

If sensible, sober men will visit the College for themselves, as Mr. Martin has done, instead of relying upon the maudlin utterances of prejudiced ignorant men who know nothing of Agriculture and have never known anything of the practical management of a College, all the prejudice in regard to this institution will disappear and we will have hearty co-operation among the real friends of Agricultural and industrial education, instead of the discord and bickering which neutralizes all efforts for good and brings reproach upon the whole system.

EDITORS OF THE PRACTICAL FARMER:

Several articles have appeared in different papers, concerning the management of the Agricultural College of Pennsylvania. As I am one of the number who were somewhat prejudiced against the management of that institution, I will take the liberty of giving my opinion, formed through personal observation.

Long experience and an active business life have taught me the truth, that all questions have two sides, and that it is much safer and better to form an opinion from personal observation, than from hearsay—particularly in regard to the cultivation and management of a farm. I, therefore, feeling a deep interest in agricultural affairs, determined to visit the Penn'a Farm Instiution, and make my own observations, at a time when everything was in full operation; and the trustees and a number intelligent farmers were present, with whom I could converse, and whose opinions and views I could gather and compare with my own. I spent nearly two days on the farm, and was delighted with the beautiful country in which it is located, and the magnificent college buildings that adorn the grounds. During my stay I was not idle—so I made a pretty thorough examination both of the farm and the buildings. In looking over a farm, the orchard is always about the first thing that attracts my attention; and I admit, that if the trees were not planted with the object of making rail timber out of them, the selection was not a good one. But as popular opinion favors such trees, I shall find no fault. Not all who plant trees have made their planting, growth, and general culture, a study; therefore not all who plant, know how to select and cultivate their trees to the best advantage.

Next to the pomological department, the agricultural drew my attention. And as I was taught how to hold a plow, on a well-conducted Lancaster county farm, drink no lager, and use no tobacco, perhaps my judgment may be admitted to be reasonably clear. Having no axe to grind, I gave all my attention to an impartial investigation of all the farming operations. I must therefore admit that I could not see how any set of men placed under the same circumstances, could do any better than the energetic, thoroughly educated, and systematic gentlemen who are now conducting the several departments of the college and farm. All men of experience know how much easier it is to find fault with, than to better the condition of things. And on visiting this farm, the only wonder to me was, how, with over five score of young men and boys, working only occasional hours, they managed to keep everything in such nice, systematic order. I have the experience to know the difficulties attending such labor.—Some very serious mistakes, no doubt, may have occurred in days gone by; but I feel confident that the college now, under its present management, is doing all that could be done by any set of men placed under the same circumstances.

If I had a son or daughter to educate, I would send them to Pennsylvania Agricultural College. In securing the services of Rev. Jas. Calder, as the President of the Faculty, the State secured a providential aid and blessing in her good work. The prejudice existing against female attending either agricultural or medical colleges, is fast passing away. Almost every young man of good sense would rather choose a wife who could manage a farm, than one who could not. Besides, the presence of lady students has a beneficial and refined influence on the male students. I speak from experience—for in my Pomological School I have male and female students. There are many who would not feel at home in this institution, for the want of lager and tobacco. They would not be in a very congenial atmosphere, as Dr. Calder's influence and prejudices against such habits are so strong.

In conclusion, I would suggest that any one who feels dissatisfied with the management of this institution, had better visit it, as it is very unsafe to rely upon flying reports, particularly when the reporter betrays a feeling of enmity. The sun shines through a very little crack, and I think some of the articles had pretty large cracks.

COAL was discovered in England in the year 1234, and first dug under a charter granted the town of New Castle by Henry III. It was first used about 1280. Dyers, brewers, etc., began to consume it extensively in 1350. In consequence of an application from the nobility and gentry, Edward I., in 1398, published a proclamation against it as a public nuisance.

——When a hen lays an egg she cackles. It is her nature. When a merchant gets in a new stock of goods, it is human for him to crow over it. When the hen cackles, people know that she has laid in, or out, some fresh stock and feels rather proud of it. This is the case with Messrs. Wetsler & Twitmire. Their stock is large and varied in styles and prices to suit everybody.

MAGAZINES

THE AMERICAN FARMERS' ADVOCATE comes to hand for March, a little behind time, but the delay is accounted for by its improved appearance. The publishers, who have from the commencement shown unsual enterprise in giving a greater amount of reading matter, and of a quality unexcelled, have made one improvement after another. With this No. they commence printing upon fine paper, from clear, new type furnishing as hertofore sixteen large pages of, reading matter, stiched and cut. Every farmer and every business man should take it, and the publishers have adopted a plan which enables everybody to obtain it without cost. By sending them a subscription for any $2 or higher priced paper or magazine they furnish the ADVOCATE as a premium, without extra charge. The subscriptino prices is singly $1, or in clubs at 50 cents each.

Centaur Liniment.

There is no pain which the Centaur Liniment will not relieve, no swelling it will not subdue and no lameness which it will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true. Where the parts are not gone, its effects are marvelous. It has produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked-breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, earache, &c., upon the human frame, and of strains spavin, galls. &c., upon animals in one year than have all other pretended remedies since the world began. It is a counter-irritant, an all-healing pain reliever. Cripples throw away their crutches, the lame walk, poisonous bites are rendered harmless, and the wounded are healed without a scar. It is no humbug. The recipe is published around each bottle. It is selling as no article ever before sold, and it sells because it does just what it pretends to do. Those who now suffer from rheumatism, pain or swelling, deserve to suffer if they will not use Centaur Liniment. More than 1000 certificates of remarkable cures, including frozen limbs, chronic rheumatism, gout, running tumors, &c., have been received. We will send a circular containing certificates, the recipe, &c., gratis, to any one requesting it. One bottle of the yellow wrapper Centaur Liniment is worth one hundred dollars for spavined or sweenied horses and mules, or for screw-worm in sheep. Stock-owners—this liniment is worth your attention. No family should be without Centaur Liniment. Price, 50c. a bottle, large bottles $1. 00. J. B. ROSE & Co., 53 Broadway, New York.

CASTORIA is more than a substitute for Castor Oil. It is the only safe article in existence which is certain to assimilate the food, regulate the bowels, cure wind-colic and produce natural sleep. It contains neither minerals, morphine or alcohol, and is pleasant to take. Children need not cry and mothers may rest.

BY SENDING ONIY 25 CENTS to JAS. W. REMINGTON, at Moundsville, Marshall Co., W. Va., you will receive by return mail 500 useful receipts.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

PROSPECTUS OF THE REPUBLIC.

Believing that the inestimable privileges of self government guaranteed by the Federal Constitution involve corresponding duties, and that among these are sleepless vigilance and the devotion of the best thoughts and efforts of the citizen in aid of the preservation and development of our country and its institutions, we have determined, in furtherance of these objects, to establish a monthly magazine devoted to the discussion of the science of government and to a review of political events.

Assuming that the legitimate object of good government is provision for the welfare and happiness of the citizen, his physical comfort, educational growth, and moral development, THE REPUBLIC will bring to this test all economic questions, political action, and governmental measures.

Holding firmly that in a republic, constituted as ours is, political parties are essential, and that they furnish the best, not to say the only means of that constant and severe scrutiny to which power should be always subjected, THE REPUBLIC will insist that the country is not only safe, but safest with its destiny in the keeping of the Republican party; that measures of reform and progress must be carried forward through its instrumentality, and that its permanent ascendancy should be maintained so long as it responds to the demands of enlightened and progressive public opinion.

THE REPUBLIC will avoid unwarranted censure of opponents as well as indiscriminate praise of friends—aiming at that degree of independence and candor which concede justice to both. It will not waste words, influence, or power by purely negative criticisms, but will endeavor to promote correct action by affirmatively and plainly showing the better way. True, this line of criticism involves thought, care, investigation—with the exercise of an impartial judgment; but history has conclusively demonstrated that by these means the cause of truth and good government can be best advanced.

THE REPUBLIC will furnish a brief and accurate record of events of political and general interest, as—

The proceedings of Congress.
The decisions and action of the Executive Departments.
The action of States and of political bodies of national import.
The progress of material and educational development.
Decisions of the judiciary of political or financial importance and of general application.

The publication being monthly, the record will be made up after the events have transpired, and will make, at the close of the year, a volume of accurate and valuable information in convenient form for preservation and reference.

Among the topics claiming discussion will be—

The relative power and jurisdiction of the Federal and State Governments; the expansion of territory, revenue, finance, education, industrial schools, postal telegraph, postal savings banks, railway and canal transportation, life and fire insurance, river and harbor improvements, the public health, reforms in the public service, and the establishment of equal civil and political rights. On these and kindred subjects THE REPUBLIC will aim to convey reliable information, excite thought, and induce action.

The writers for THE REPUBLIC have been selected from among those whose sagacity, judgment, and energy were thoroughly tested in the recent political contest; and their names are withheld now, as then, for the sole reason that they prefer success through reason, argument, and the merit of their productions.

Moved by these considerations, and subordinating the question of remuneration entirely, we appeal with confidence to those who, during the recent campaign, responded so liberally in money, time, and effort, to aid in the introduction of THE REPUBLIC. The Magazine will be furnished at as near cost price as practicable, and will be enlarged whenever the patronage received will justify increased expenditure.

THE REPUBLIC will be published monthly, on superior paper, in clear type, and will contain not less than forty-eight pages of reading matter, exclusive of advertisements.

TERMS.

Two dollars per year, in advance.
Single copies, twenty-five cents.
Clubs of five, remitting ten dollars, will be entitled to six copies.
Remittance should be made by money-orders, drafts, or registered letters.
Specimen copies will be sent, postage paid, to any person enclosing ten cents.

It has often been said the majority of people have no head above their eyes—or, in other words, care more for pictures than for reading—and therefore only the consideration of expense has hitherto prevented the establishment of a daily illustrated newspaper in the City of New York. That difficulty has been removed, and THE DAILY GRAPHIC has made its appearance with four pages of admirable illustrations of art and current events, and four pages of letter press containing the cream of the news and life pictures of the day. Of course this has not been accomplished by any of the old processes of woodcuts. Recent inventions in photography, and notably the immediate transfer of photographic pictures to stone, have cheapened and simplified the system of copying impressions. It is now possible to take a printed engraving or an artist's sketch and have it transferred to the lithographic stone in from twenty minutes to two hours. The process is a secret with the Graphic Company, and cannot therefore be described. By its means the picture accompanies the compositor's work, so that the photographic or sketched counterpart of the last great event of which society is talking appears in THE DAILY GRAPHIC with the account fresh from the reporter's pencil. This would appear incredible but for the proof positive presented to our sight. All that the publishers promised has been falfilled; and THE DAILY GRAPHIC can not only hold the fields against all competitors, but has new and promising fields to conquer. Its publishers will reap a golden harvest, but the public will none the less owe them a debt of gratitude. Their practical faith in the inventions under their control has brought the best fruits of art within the means of the poor, and has given a spur to the highest style of journalism. THE DAILY GRAPHIC deserves the grand success it is sure to win.

☞BY ONE OF THE LEADING PHYSICIANS of Philadelphia city.—A careful examination of mortuary statistics established the fact that one adult person out of every six dies of consumption, and so alarmingly is this disease gaining the ascendancy over all other ills to which flesh is heir, that its approach to one's immediate circle is regarded with perfect horror. If you will carefully examine the records of Materia Medica you will invariably discover that the general want of success in treating diseases has not been a deficiency of pathological knowledge of the functions affected, but of a suitable compound that would act upon the disease and all the sympathetic affections.

This want has at last been met in the Bitter Wine of Iron, prepared by the celebrated Dr. E. F. Kunkle, No 259 North Ninth street, Philadelphia. This excellent compound can be taken by persons with the most delicate stomach without any debilitating effect always giving strength and largely increasing the nervous energy of the patient. In all cases of pulmonary complaints it is admirably adapted to relieve the severity of the symptoms in the advanced stages of the disease, or to arrest it in its incipiency. If you want something that will give you strength, a good appetite, build up your constitution, and in place of moroseness and a lack of energy, give you a brisk and vigorous feeling, try Kunkel's Bitter Wine of Iron. It has already received the meed of praise from thousands who have tested its virtues, and for many years maintained its reputation with unfaded popularity.

Price $1 per bottle. E. F. KUNKEL, Sole Proprietor, No. 259 North Ninth street, below Vine, Philadelphia.

A New ERA in JOURNALISM.

The Great Achievement of the Nineteenth Century.

"THE DAILY GRAPHIC."

All the News and Full of Pictures.

THE DAILY GRAPHIC is the title of a newspaper, published in New York, which is achieving the most remarkable journalistic success ever chronicled. It is an eight-page evening paper (three editions daily), elegantly printed, and conducted by the ablest editorial talent attainable.

As a newspaper THE DAILY GRAPHIC stands in the first rank, and contains regularly

The Very Latest and Fullest News from all Parts of the World.

Its great feature consists in the fact that it is not only a newspaper, but an illustrated newspaper as well. Four of its pages are filled with choice reading matter—telegrams, editorials, general and local news, items, gossip, and correspondence on the freshest and most interesting topics. The remaining four pages consist of executed in the most faultless and artistic style and portraying accurately and fully all leading events within twenty-four hours after their occurrence. Those who have made journalism a study, and fully appreciate the great enterprise manifested in the collection and publication of news by the aid of the telegraph, steam presses, and the development of journalistic talent, have been fond of advancing the theory that the next advance in that field would result in a newspaper furnishing in its regular issues pictures of all current prominent events. That theory is a theory no longer; the newspaper of the future is the newspaper of to-day, and that paper is THE DAILY GRAPHIC. The processes which render this marvellous achievement an existing fact are the results of the most careful study and an endless variety of experiments, gradually perfected during the past twelve years. They depend upon improvements in lithography and the application of the photographic camera. By their aid a picture is engraved and made ready to print in from twenty minutes to two hours. Costly and elaborate plates, works of art, scenes of interest, are reproduced and pictured forth with equal facility and the most scrupulous fidelity. Illustrations of leading events are engraved and prepared for the press even before the accompanying written narrative or description leaves the hands of compositor.

For the proper practical working of so great an enterprise, THE GRAPHIC COMPANY was formed, with

A Capital of $500,000 in Gold, months and months before the first issue of THE DAILY GRAPHIC, the most extensive preparations were made, and to-day THE GRAPHIC COMPANY has

The Largest and Most Complete Newspaper Establishment in the United States.

In the great work of illustrating the events of the day an extensive corps of the best known and most accomplished artists are constantly engaged.

THE DAILY GRAPHIC aims to be in its strictest sense a newspaper. Striving always to be just and truthful, it discusses all questions independently and impartially. It is not the organ of any party, sect or creed. It is always high-toned, and contains nothing to offend any taste. Its contents give it an immense advantage over the "old fashioned" papers. The annual subscriber gets a volume of twenty-four hundred pages, constituting a valuable record of events and a graphic panorama of our time and progress. It possesses not merely a local interest, but is a paper for every reader of the language. It is, emphatically,

A PICTORIAL HISTORY OF THE YEARS,

The Paper for the Household.

KATHAIRON

Only 50 Cents per Bottle.

It promotes the GROWTH, PRESERVES the COLOR, and increases the Vigor and BEAUTY of the HAIR.

OVER THIRTY YEARS AGO LYON'S KATHAIRON FOR THE HAIR was first placed in the market by Professor E. Thomas Lyon, a graduate of Princeton College. The name is derived from the Greek, "KATHRO," signifying to cleanse, purify, rejuvenate, or restore. The favor it has received, and the popularity it has obtained, is unprecedented and incredible. It increases the GROWTH and BEAUTY of the HAIR. It is a delightful dressing. It eradicates Dandruff. It prevents the Hair from turning gray. It keeps the head cool, and gives the hair a rich, soft, glossy appearance. It is the SAME in QUANTITY and QUALITY as it was over a QUARTER of a CENTURY AGO, and is sold by all Druggists and Country Stores at only Fifty Cents per Bottle.

Woman's Glory is Her Hair.

PROSPECTUS

POPULAR JOURNAL OF

Physical And Mental Hygiene

Edited By Thos. H. Helsby, M. D., and Thos. F. Mays, M. D.

This Journal is intended to popularize that department of Medical Science which relates to the preservation of Health and the prevention of Disease. The urgent need of such a periodical is felt by all classes; by none more than the Medical Profession itself.

Its pages will be devoted to upholding the claims of legitimate and rational medicine, by warning the public against the evils and dangers of the misapplication of medicinal agents, and the bold pretensions of empirics, charlatans and quacks.

It will be the constant effort of the editors to teach the community that the proper sphere of domestic and nursery effort should be, to use all the resources of Hygiene and Sanitary Science to prevent disease, but when a case of real sickness occurs, no time should be lost in seeking professional advice.

It will be the special endeavor of this Journal to point out the ethical relations between Physician and Patient, that the public may be educated to a higher appreciation of professional services, and to juster views of the powers and true mission of medical science.

It will contain original and selected articles upon the regulations of all the physical agents necessary to health, such as the influence of Air, and its relations to respiration, including ventilation; Food, its adaptation to the varying conditions of age, habits of life, and climate, with its adulteration; Exercise, as affecting the muscles, sense and brain; Physical Education, as bearing upon the health of children; Personal and General Cleanliness, and the Use of Baths; Clothing, its physiological uses, and as a cause of disease under the absurd dictates of fashion. Special attention will also be given to Medical Police, as the modifying influence of climate and sanitary legislation; Drainage, Water Supply, and the Location and Surroundings of Buildings; the Influence of various Trades and Professions upon Physical and Mental Health; the Relation of Mind and Body, and the Influence of Education upon Health.

All these varied topics will be discussed in a plain and practical manner, divested of all professional technicalities, and with the aid of all data afforded the most recent researches in sanitary science.

It is believed that such a Journal will be found a valuable auxiliary to the intelligent and conscientious physician in his efforts to overcome that gross ignorance in relation to matters pertaining to medicine, which is too often the greatest barrier to his success; therefore we invoke the aid of the profession in bringing this periodical before the public, for whose benefit it is mainly intended.

THE BEST THAT I CAN.

"I cannot do much," said a little star,
"To make the dark world bright;
My silvery beams cannot struggle far
Through the folding gloom of night;
But I'm only a part of God's great plan,
And I'll cheerfully do the best that I can."

"What is the use," said a fleecy cloud,
"Of these few drops that I hold,
They will hardly bend the lily proud,
Though caught in her cup of gold;
Yet I am a part of God's great plan,
So my treasure I'll give as well as I can."

A child went merrily forth to play;
But a thought, like a silver thread,
Kept winding in and out all day
Through the happy golden head;
Mother said, "Darling, do all you can,
For you are a part of God's great plan."

She knew no more than the glancing star,
Nor the cloud with its chalice full,
How, why, and for what all strange things were;
She was only a child at school;
But she thought, "It is part of God's great plan
That even I should do all I can."

She helped a younger child along
When the road was rough to the feet,
And she sang from her heart a little song
That we all thought passing sweet;
And her father, a weary, toil-worn man,
Said, "I will do likewise the best that I can."

Our best! Ah, children, the best of us
Must hide our faces away,
When the Lord of the vineyard comes to look
At our task at the close of the day;
But for strength from above (t'is the Master's plan)
We'll pray, and we'll all do the best we can.

The Jar of Honey.

I.

Now, Emma be a good little girl while I am gone," said Emma's mother. "I shall be back in less than half an hour. I am only going to carry some things to old Mrs Winslow."

"I don't like old Mrs. Winslow," said Emma.

"But why don't you like her? What do you know of her?" asked mamma.

"Isn't she the old woman who makes the soothing syrup?" asked Emma.

"Oh, no! this is another Mrs. Winslow, a very different person," said mamma; "one who does not approve of the soothing-syrup," added mamma.

"Then I shall love her dearly; for neither do I approve of the soothing-syrup," said Emma. "If the Mrs. Winslow who makes it had to swallow it herself, she wouldn't be quite so hard on us children, I think. Now, what I like is honey, grapes, peaches, and pine-apple marmalade."

"Well, good-by now, for a little while," said mamma.

II.

But, before she closed the door, mamma added, "Now, be sure to get into no sort of mischief while I am gone. You are quite a little girl to be left in charge of the house. Let me see how well you and your doll Ida can do."

"My doll Ida and I will do very well," said Emma. "I am five years old, you know; and, as for Ida, a thief might put a pistol to her head, and she would not be afraid."

"I can well believe it," said mother. And off she went to Mrs. Winslow's.

Then Emma played with her doll Ida, but soon tired of that; and putting Ida down on the floor, looked about to see what she could find to amuse her.

At last she spied out two jars on a shelf in the wash-room, and, on a wash-bench, another jar. First she peeped into the jar without a handle that stood on the shelf; and then she peeped into the other jar on the shelf; and this one had a handle.

III.

The two jars on the shelf were emtpty; but when Emma took hold of the handle of the jar on the wash-bench, tipped it up and looked in, she saw that there was some honey at the bottom.

Then the little girl thought to herself, This must be one of the jars that mother told Eliza to wash. But it is a pity so much good honey should be wasted. There is some dry honey-comb on top; but, if I take that out, I think I shall find some nice honey underneath.

Then she thought, "But is it right for me to touch the honey without asking leave of my mother?"

She had some doubts on this point. Had she listened wisely to her good thoughts, she would have heard them say, "Do not touch it, Emma! You must wait till your mother comes home. She will let you have some of the honey if she thinks it good for you. Do not meddle with it. It does not belong to you. Fly from evil and evil will fly from you."

IV.

Such was the good advice that the good thoughts gave; but the bad thoughts came to her, and said, "Doesn't it look nice? Just take off that dry honeycomb, and under it you will find the sweet, delicious honey."

"Don't do it, Emma!" murmured the good thoughts, growing fainter and fainter.

"Hold your tongue, will you?" cried the bad thoughts to the good thoughts! "You would like to starve her, you would! You hate to see her jolley, you do!"

"No; I would like to make her a good, consciencious child," sighed the good thoughts, shrinking back from a quarrel. "Take Ida up and go away, little girl—away from temptation.

"Stop that preaching!" cried the bad thoughts, getting angry. You are always in the way! You make her as stupid as you are yourself!"

Then the good thoughts fled; and Emma took off the honeycomb, and dipped her fingers into the nice, sweet honey, and began to eat of it. Ida looked on, but too heedless to see that her little mamma was doing wrong.

V.

"Oh! isn't it sweet?" thought Emma, pausing to take breath.

"There is honey here at the bottom that sticks," said Emma.

"Put your head in, my dear, and lick it up," said the bad thoughts. Don't leave a drop of it. Honey can't hurt you. I wonder that those stupid bees who keep working all the time, and never stop to have a little fun, can make anything so nice. That's right, my dear; put your head in. In with it!"

Emma worked her head into the jar, and began to lick up the honey from the bottom

VI.

"Oh dear! Help, help! It's stifling me," cried Emma, as she struggled to get the jar off her head.

At the first cry for help the bad thoughts all scampered off like cowards. They had got the little girl into trouble, but they would not see her out of it.

Emma was so much alarmed that she fell flat on the floor, crying "Help, help!" But the cry was low and smothered.

At last a good little thought drew near, and whispered to her: "Pick up that iron skillet that lies on the floor, and hammer with it on the jar till you break it on your head."

Then Emma groped about on the floor found the skillet, and hammered with it on the jar till the jar broke, and her head was free, though somewhat bruised.

When her mother came home, Emma told her the whole stoay, and her mother said:

"This will teach you, I hope, to mind your good thoughts rather than your bad."—The Nursery.

"HUMBUG" is a corruption of the Irish words um bog, pronounced oombug, signifying soft copper, or pewter, or brass or worthless money, such as was made by James II. at the Dublin mint—twenty shillings of which was worth only two pence sterling. At first applied to worthless coin, the words became the general title of anything false or counterfeit.

A CELEBRATED physician was called upon recently by a person suffering from rheumatism, who insisted upon his doing something for him. The physician wrote a prescription, and as the patient went out of the room said to him, "I wish you would let me know if that does you any good, for I have myself been very much troubled with rheumatism lately."

CICERO said: "As I approve of a boy that has something of the old man in him so I am no less pleased with the old man that has something of the youth."

Agricultural.

Fowls Taking Cold.

A great proportion of the ills to which fowls are subject arise from taking cold; during moulting season they are most sensitive to the changes of the atmosphere. Land and Water has the following timely suggestions relating to the inducing cause, and the remedies:

The earlier symptoms are slight loss of appetite, drooping of the tail, and a clear limpid discharge from the nostrils. It is entirely due to exposures to damp and cold winds, and imperfect housing; but there are inducing causes frequently combined; improper and insufficient food is one which materially aids it by rendering the system poor and weak and incapable of resisting or shaking off any kind of hardship, however light. Breeding in and in, that is from stock related to each, other, is another means by which artificially reared families are certain to become weak and the seed of various diseases quickly sown, and the constitutions degenerated with an inevitable certainty. Seeing, therefore, the means by which the stock is to be prepared for resisting the simplest disorders, should an attack come upon them in the form of a cold, take a few precautions for removing the cause, if it can be found by extra dryness of the soil upon which they rest, and taking special care they are not in the vicinity of stagnant moisture. There are few cases of simple catarrh that will not speedily yield to a little more generous feeding than that they have been used to. Crumbs of bread soaked in spiced ale are wonderfully efficacious, and should be given in addition to other meals if they will partake of so much. If the birds have not been carefully looked after in the first stages of the complsint it invariable runs into a worse condition. From the clear discharges from the nostrils as before mentioned, it here takes the most offensive forms; becomes thick and clotted, stopping up the nostrils; and the cavities of the air passages, being highly inflamed, continue to secrete the discharge. The eyes also become inflamed, and the frothy secretion exudes from the eyelids. The face and eyelids at once become swollen and the bird cannot see to feed. Here we have a troublesome case, and if the bird is valuable it should be removed at once to waam indoor quarters. We do not hesitate to say that there is no more contagious disease known to the feathered tribe; and any bird so attacked should be immediately removed from the rest. There is no doubt the disease is communicable in various ways, such as drinking out of the same water vessel, the liquid being contaminated by the discharge. In the same way the food they peck over; or the grass in their runs holds upon it some of the matter coughed or sneezed up. It is only with birds of value that real attempts at cure should be made, which should be to purge out with a dose of castor oil first. Bathe the head and nostrils with a warm, weak solution of carbolic acid; keep it from the bird's eyes. When the matter is free from the nostrils slightly syringe (with a small ear syringe) some of the solutions up the same. Well dry the feathers about the head and neck. Pills of the following part should be always at hand, and one, night and morning, administered while the birds are ill: Quarter of an ounce of camphor, quarter of an ounce of cayenne pepper, quarter of an ounce of lobelia seed powder, quarter of an ounce of gum myrrh; make into forty-eight pills.

A YOUNG LADY FARMER

The Prairie Farmer says: We lately had the pleasure of "interviewing" a Miss A., of Illinois, who for some years past has been engaged in carrying on a farm of 120 acres; and, deeming her example worthy of imitation in these days of unhealthful and lackadaisical womanhood, we have made a few notes for the benefit of our readers.

Miss A. was a teacher; but at the time of her commencing farming was a student in a leading young ladies' seminary of the country. Her father died, leaving a widow, and, we believe, two daughters and a boy, of whom Miss A. was the eldest, and the boy a lad of ten or a dozen years of age, The farm was, we believe, encumdered with a considerable amount of debt. She found the health of her mother, who was endeavoring to manage the farm with hired help, failing and concluding, as she expressed it, that she would rather keep her mother than get an education, she left the seminary in 1868 and commenceed farming.

The farm at that time consisted of eighty acres of the home farm, about half of which was in cultivation, and most of which was bottom land, rich, but was more or less subject to overflow, and off a little distance were forty acres more, all in cultivation. The home farm had a pretty good house, but the barn had recently been burned, and the fences were not good. Twelve acres had been planted to apples of good variety. She had one horse, and got the loan of another from a friend, who also aids and is aided in turn by lending implements, &c. She has now a good team of her own raising, besides a horse that does duty in the market-wagon.

So she went to work with the aid of her then little brother, and to some extent of her mother and sister, who also took charge of the housekeeping. They hired but little labor, and as far as possible, did their own work. She learned to do nearly all kinds of work. She does not plow much, but she can do it. She took out 50 to 100 stumps in one year with spade and ax, at the same time assiting her brother who was drilling wheat. Shh bound and shocked wheat, and can drive team well. She can use the ax pretty well; formerly she could chop better than her brother, but now he chops as well as she can herself, and she does less of it. She wears a gymnastic suit when at home, and at work, a broad brimmed hat, gloves, and boots made to order. She wishes to look as well as other girls, and thus protects herself from the exposure resulting from out-door labor. She likes the open-air life and the out-door work, and is healthy and strong—quite a miracle of vigor from the modern young lady's standpoint.

Most of the home farm is cultivated in corn, though she has eight acres in grass and 12 in orchard. She raised 53 acres of winter wheat in 1872. It was a fine crop, but she lost from 3 to 5 acres from failure of the man she had engaged to cut it in time. Even then, with scarce and inefficient labor by that feeble class of men that are always willing to take advantage of those who cannot help themselves, it costs her $80 to harvest and thresh the wheat. Yet she got 450 bushels of wheat, weighing 62 pounds to the bushel.

The young orchard bore a good deal of fruit in 1872, and she sold 100 barrels of summer apples, and has 150 bushels of apples now in the cellar. She took most of the apples to market herself, selling some of them as low as 75 cents per barrel, and some as high as $1.

Salt for Farm Stock.

Prof. James E. Johnson, of Scotland, says that half the saline matter of the blood (75 per cent.) consists of common salt, and as this is partly dissolved every day through the skin and kidneys, the necessity of continued supplies of it to the healthy body is sufficiently obvious. The bile also contains soda (one of the ingredients of salt) as a special and indispensable constituent, and so do all the cantilages of the body. Stint the supply of salt, and neither will the bile be able properly to assist digestion nor the cartilages to be built up again as fast as they naturally waste. It is better to place salt where stock can have free access to it than give it occasionally in small quantities. They will help themselves to what they need, if allowed to do so at pleasure; otherwise, when they become salt-hungry, they may take more than wholesome.

A HIGH way—The milky way.

SOMETHING to weep over—a bushel of onions.

WHAT burns to keep a secret? Sealing wax, to be sure.

RIGHT principles will by no means suit wrong practices.

WHAT is the form of an escaped parrot? A Polly-gone.

BEGGARS always find one kind of provision plenty—the cold shoulder.

IN making our arrangements to live, we should never forget that we have also to die.

A YOUNG man in town, who is wrestling with his first moutache, proposes to name it after two leading base ball clubs, because there are nine on a side.

"BOY, why did you take an armful of my shingles on Sunday?" "Why, sir, mother wanted some kiudling-wood, and I didn't want to split wood on a Sunday."

A SOUTHERN negro knowing the profits of internal revenue officers, exclaimed, when he heard that Rothschild had left a fortune of four hundred millions: "Golly he must a had good destrick."

BAD LUCK is simply a man with his hands in his pockets and his pipe in his mouth, looking on to see how it will come out. Good luck is a man of pluck, with his sleeves rolled up, and working to make it come out right.

A LADY writer says if women were as particular in choosing a virtuous husband as men are in selecting a virtuous wife, a moral reformation would soon begin which would be something more than froth and form.

THOMAS BILBY, a Scotch school master, who died recently at the age of 78, was the author of the song, "O that will be joyful," and another Scotch schoolmaster, Andrew Young, wrote the hymn, "There is a happy land."

A GENTLEMAN was once asked, "What action gave you the greatest pleasure in life?" "When I stopped the sale of a poor widow's furniture, by paying a small sum due by her for rent, and had her blessing," he replied.

AN old minister, the other day, asked a woman what could be done to induce her husband to attend church. "I don't know," she said, "unless you were to put a pipe and a jug of whiskey in the pew."

THE following concise and comprehensive note was sent to an Illinois merchant, by a neighboring farmer, the other day: "Send me a trace-chain and two hinges. Jane had a baby last nigh—also two padlocks."

HIRAM POWERS, the sculptor, writes that no house has been burned in Florence during his residence there of thirty-five years, for the reason, he says, that all floors are brick or stone, all stairways metallic or stone, and all the joists and rafters bricked over before the tiles are put in.

"UNLESS you give me aid," said a beggar to a benevolent lady, "I am afraid I shall have to resort to something which I greatly dislike to do." The lady handed him a dollar, and compassionately asked, "What is it, poor man, that I saved you from?" "Work," was the mournful answer.

NAT M. was a queer genius. A neighbor found him one day at work at an enormous wood pile, sawing away for dear life, with an intolerable dull saw. "Why don't you sharpen the saw, Nat?" asked the neighbor. Looking up with an inimitable droll expression, he replied: "I should think I had enough to do to saw up this wood-pile, without stopping to sharpen saws."

without this Divine gift all else was of little value.

Over both these classes the influence of Christ gained daily. They acknowledged the righteousness of his searching standard, they saw that he spoke from his deepest convictions and unreasoningly, perhaps, they admitted the authority which he claimed as God's special messenger. When we reflect against what odds he stood, the perjudice, parent of cruelty, hate and meanness, which met him on every side, it is a marvel that even one was found to follow him in his perilous path to Cavalry.

One charm he bore that all must have seen who cared to look beyond the surface of his troubled career, the charm of that peace which descending from Heaven lies too deep to be disturbed by the world's cares or sorrows. That coveted peace was surely his, and the tossed, troubled, unresting spirit that came within his sphere must have longed to share with him that pearl of price. My peace I give unto you! Oh gracious Lord of all thy divine benefactions this is the most precious, for when it hath its abiding-place in the heart, life is a richer, holier thing, and content, the calm wise angel, brings life's choicest blessings in the train.

The mourner prays for peace. The swollen and tumultuous tides of grief have laid waste all earth's pleasant places; flowers have lost their hue and fragrance, and the sun is shorn of its beams. The dove of peace knocks at the heart for entrance, and if admitted stills the throb of agony with its heaven-brought consolations, and brings with it the calmer light of the celestial city.

My peace I give unto you! Aye Christ offers it to the sinful, tempest-tossed soul into whose darkened chambers no good thing dares to enter. He offers this peace but he asks a price—repentance, renunciation. Cast thy sins behind thee, cleanse each spot and stain with prayer and earnest endeavor and the sacred guest is yours.

To the disappointed, the struggling, the week, to him whose life is one long scene of unrest, the Savior offers as of old his choicest blessing, and it is his to bestow; but even he has no power to enforce it upon the rebellious spirit. It must be coveted, striven for as well as longed for, and when the home is prepared the welcome visitant is ready.

My peace! and what could restless, dissatisfied, mourning human nature wish for more—on earth, in heaven the seal of each coveted blessing. Draw near to Him in whom the fountain wells, and of the streams that flow thence drink and be filled. The world has no counter charm to offer,—it has nought through its wide domains that can soothe the troubled soul to rest; that panacea must be found in earnest action, in holy deeds that are prayers, in faith, love and hope, in the bosom of Christ the Sent of God, Savior, Redeemer, Friend.

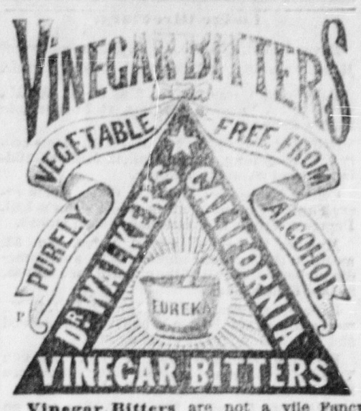
MEDICAL.



Vinegar Bitters are not a vile Fancy Drink, made of Poor Rum, Whiskey, Proof Spirits and Refuse Liquors, doctored, spiced, and sweetened to please the taste, called "Tonics," "Appetizers," "Restorers," &c., that lead the tippler on to drunkenness and ruin, but are a true Medicine, made from the native roots and herbs of California, free from all Alcoholic Stimulants. They are the Great Blood Purifier and a Life-giving Principle, a Perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the system, carrying off all poisonous matter and restoring the blood to a healthy condition, enriching it, refreshing and invigorating both mind and body. They are easy of administration, prompt in their action, certain in their results, safe and reliable in all forms of disease.

No Person can take these Bitters according to directions, and remain longun well, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia. In these complaints it has no equal, and one bottle will prove a better guarantee of its merits than a lengthy advertisement.

For Female Complaints, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood, or the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters display so decided an influence that a marked improvement is soon perceptible.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have been most successful. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.

They are a Gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing also the peculiar merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver and Visceral Organs and in Bilious Diseases.

For Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt-Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-worms, Scald-Head, Sore Eyes Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters. One bottle in such cases will convince the most incredulous of their curative effects.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions, or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul; your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure, and the health of the system will follow.

Grateful Thousands proclaim VINEGAR BITTERS the most wonderful Invigorant that ever sustained the sinking system.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. Says a distinguished physiologist: There is scarcely an individual on the face of the earth whose body is exempt from the presence of worms. It is not upon the healthy elements of the body that worms exist, but upon the diseased humors and slimy deposits that breed these living monsters of disease. No system of medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelminitics, will free the system from worms like these Bitters.

Mechanical Diseases.—Persons engaged in Paints and Minerals, such as Plumbers, Typesetters, Gold-beaters, and Miners, as they advance in life, are subject to paralysis of the Bowels. To guard against this, take a dose of WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS twice a week.

Bilious, Remittent, and Intermittent Fevers, which are so prevalent in the valleys of our great rivers throughout the United States, especially those of the Mississippi, Ohio, Missouri, Illinois, Tennessee, Cumberland, Arkansas, Red, Colorado, Brazos, Rio Grande, Pearl, Alabama, Mobile, Savannah, Roanoke, James, and many others, with their vast tributaries, throughout our entire country during the Summer and Autumn, and remarkably so during seasons of unusual heat and dryness, are invariably accompanied by extensive derangements of the stomach and liver, and other abdominal viscera. In their treatment, a purgative, exerting a powerful influence upon these various organs, is essentially necessary. There is no cathartic for the purpose equal to DR. J. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS, as they will speedily remove the dark-colored viscid matter with which the bowels are loaded, at the same time stimulating the secretions of the liver, and generally restoring the healthy functions of the digestive organs.

Scrofula, or King's Evil, White Swellings, Ulcers, Erysipelas, Swelled neck, Goitre, Scrofulous Inflammations, Indolent Inflammations, Mercurial Affections, Old Sores, Eruptions of the Skin, Sore Eyes, etc., etc. In these as in all other constitutional Diseases, WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS have shown their great curative powers in the most obstinate and intractable cases.

Dr. Walker's California Vinegar Bitters act on all these cases in a similar manner. By purifying the Blood they remove the cause, and by resolving away the effects of the inflammation (the tubercular deposits) the affected parts receive health, and a permanent cure is effected.

The properties of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS are Aperient, Diaphoretic, Carminative, Nutritious, Laxative, Diuretic, Sedative, Counter-Irritant, Sudorific, Alterative, and Anti-Bilious.

The Aperient and mild Laxative properties of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS are the best safe-guard in cases of eruptions and malignant fevers, their balsamic, healing, and soothing properties protect the humors of the fauces. Their Sedative properties allay pain in the nervous system, stomach, and bowels, either from inflammation, wind, colic, cramps, etc.

Fortify the body against disease by purifying all its fluids with VINEGAR BITTERS. No epidemic can take hold of a system thus fore-armed.

Directions.—Take of the Bitters on going to bed at night from a half to one and one-half wine-glassfull. Eat good nourishing food, such as beef-steak, mutton chop, venison, roast beef, and vegetables, and take out-door exercise. They are composed of purely vegetable ingredients, and contain no spirit.

Bellefonte and County.

——The Legislature, according to programme, will adjourn to-morrow. Who cares?

——Our beautiful little park, will soon receive additional improvements and ornaments.

——Our neighbor over the way, Hon. P. Gray Meek, is beautifying the grounds around his handsome residence.

——Some leather-headed sneak-thief entered A. Sussman's warehouse, last week, and stole a quantity of leather.

——Credit Mobilier collars are the latest agony. "Independent," the Sir Oracle of the Watchman, ought to have one made of hemp.

——Those Alderney cows belonging to Adam Hoy, Esq., amuse themselves on Howard street, by giving chase to the timid children.

——A table fork and a tight knot in a shoe string, lately caused the loss of an eye of a little daughter of Jacob Bowers, of Haines township.

——Major Samuel Brown, a gallant soldier of the late war, and formerly a resident of this county, has removed to Frederick city, Md.

——Centre county court begins on the fourth Monday of this month. The lawyers are already whetting their knives, while subpœnas and statements swell the mails.

——If you go the distance of three or four miles outside of Bellefonte any of these fine mornings, you will find pigeons to the right of you, pigeons to the left of you, pigeons all around you.

——The date of the first thunder shower of the season, in this place, was fixed for last Saturday evening, and there was no postponement on account of the weather. It was a good, refreshing April shower.

——William S. Tripple, the fashionable tailor in Felty's building on High street is doing a thriving business. If you want neatly fitting garments, made in the most perfect and durable manner, go to him and leave your order.

——Some of the inquisitive people of Centre Hall don't exactly understand the functions of a "Notary Public." Let them have patience, and light may, ere long, dispel the mist that envelops their minds in regard to this question.

——The young equestrian on Linn st. who tried, last Monday, to go on, after his horse had stopped, is informed that it is a difficult job to do. He fell into a mud-puddle on a prominent part of his body. He stands up a good deal now, and rather prefers it.

——It is amusing to see our insurance agents "go for" the itinerant branch of the profession when they attempt to work up the business here. The traveling missionary finds it an up-hill business to scratch in the yards of our local agents.

——Presiding Elder Reese will soon take up his temporal abode in this place. We wonder if he cannot bring some influence to bear on our Methodist brethren that will induce them to build a house of worship in some accessible part of town.

——Phil. D. Stover, of the Centre Reporter, is "ous ga speilt," or words to that effect. A Mr. Foot, from Mifflinburg, has placed his name at the head of that teutonic sheet. Perhaps Fred. Kurtz's last parting salute was a little too tonic for Phil. D. Stover. The Centre Hall man gave us an advertisement last week, and we are much obliged, for we are a little on the Tuten-ic order ourselves.

——They are well developed, numerous and very nauceating—those huge piles of ashes and other filth. Bishop street has the most aggravated forms of it. They are as painful looking as boils, and as numerous as warts on a toad. In the name of all that is healthful and beautiful, we appeal to you, property-owners and tenants, to remove them immediately.

——We neglected to say last week, that Maj. P. B. Wilson will accompany Hon. John Irwin, Jr., and party to the Pacific coast. The Major will visit the Yosemite valley, Dow's and Poker Flats, and other points of interest in the Golden State, and, upon his return, will deliver several lectures in this vicinity describing "sights and scenes" of his transcontinental tour.

——It was April 1st. The directors asked Mr. John L. Kurtz, to go to Centre Hall and put the new bank in running order, saying they would send for him in the evening. The offer being accepted, Centre Hall was soon reached and the bank set in motion. Evening came and with it, supper at Spangler's but no messenger came for "little Johnny." He was very anxious to get home; some business engagements required his presence here, and "Lop" had promised to send for him. The night wore on and Mr. Kurtz, feeling that he was the victim of an all fool's day joke, managed to worry through the evening with Mr. Spangler, whom he had actually defeated in the contest for the office of Sheriff in the canvas of last fall. They settled their differances at the bar—of mutual agreement, and—now for the other side of this double play among the bankers. The Centre Co. Bank finished the business of the day and the ponderous safe with its valuable contents was duly locked. In the evening a customer came in and asked to have a check cashed. The accommodating cashier, always willing to oblige, tried to unlock the safe, but, mirabile dictu, he had forgotten the "open sesame" and the safe wouldn't unlock, any how. Experts were called in but the bolts responded not to their skill. What was to be done? Before nine o'clock the next day the safe must be opened or much "embarrassment" would follow. There was but one outlet, Mr. Kurtz must be sent for, and, ere the sun had risen, a solitary vehicle might have been seen in front of Spangler's, its occupant asking for Mr. Kurtz. When they returned to Bellefonte the safe was easily opened, and thus ended a double "joke" in which the "biter was bit."

——Rev. U. S. Condit removed from this place to Jacksonville, on Tuesday last, to take charge of the Presbyterian congregations at Jacksonville and Hublersburg. Although Mr. Condit has attended to the pastoral duties of these congregations for some time, yet he has made his home in Bellefonte, where he has won the respect and confidence of all whose good fortune it was to know him. His genial, courteous manner, his noble, broad ideas on all subjects, together with his christian sympathy and kindness of heart, and these, coupled with unbounded zeal and faithfulness of purpose in every good work, have won for him many warm friends and admirers not only here, but wherever he has gone.

We are not surprised to hear of the hearty welcome tendered him upon his arrival at Jacksonville. The ladies of the two parishes had in waiting at his new home, a most delicious repast, and the brethren made him a valuable donation of almost everything that would add to his comfort and pleasure. It was a most substantial token of their kindly appreciation of this good man's ministration among them.

May he live long to enjoy their favor and do them good, and may the crowning years of his life add new lusters to his many virtues.

——We were at Milesburg on last Saturday. On our way down, we looked in upon the busy workmen of Linn & McCoy's great iron establishment. Everything in and about these works betoken thrift and good times. We will have more to say of them hereafter.

We called to see J. Brant Hahn, who keeps a store and runs an axe factory at Milesburg. The axes he makes are said to be the best made in the county—at any rate the demand for them keeps him very busy.

We were shown the latest enterprise of the village—a horse-shoe factory.—This is owned and controlled by Harrison Levi, who intends to manufacture horse-shoes after the patent obtained by D. I. Pruner, Esq., of this place. This patent shoe is said to possess any number of good qualities not found in the old style.

A few of the solid citizens took special delight in showing us the fine location offered by Milesburg for the Railroad company's car shops. They want to turn to some account the old "race course" below town; but the railroad company will look to its own interests, and accept the superior inducements offered by Bellefonte. We have a much better location, and, in addition, the very best kind of water power, besides other valuable considerations to offer, which Milesburg can't bring forward.

——Will the flowers bloom in time for Decoration day? Will the people of Centre county show their patriotism and respect for the solders, sleeping in our cemeteries, by observing this national custom? Have the fallen soldiers of this county any fathers, brothers, sisters or widows who will pay to their memory the tribute of their love by strewing nature's gifts, the fresh, young flowers of spring, upon their graves? Let every soldier's grave in the county be remembered on memorial day, the 30th of May.

——A little daughter of Joseph Eckly who lives near the ore bank on Hoy's farm, was accidentally shot in the knee on last Saturday by a lad named Hines.

The little girl is not dangerously injured, although her escape was almost miraculous. This accident is another instance of the dangerous habit of handling fire arms carelessly.

——Open your cellars and remove the accumulated garbage.

——The farmers are now sending their fat cattle to market.

——Shade trees should now be set, in place of the dead ones, on the school grounds.

——The "Equitable Life Insurance Co." is the leading company in this county.

——The jolly raftsmen make things right interesting on the B. E. V. R. R. now-a-days.

——R. H. Duncan's six mules were bought by James Huston of Nittany, for one thousand dollars.

——Bellefonte barbers scrape more acquaintances than any other class of people, and still they are modest.

——Quite a number of new buildings will please Bellefonte carpenters, and add to Bellefonte's beauty, this spring.

——That little bill in the Senate asking to dignify Howard borough with a Burgess and authority to collect a special tax, is all right.

——Sale of store goods at Half Moon. Now is your time to buy store goods at auction, cheap, at H. S. Thompson's, on Monday, April 14. See posters all over the county.

——The BELLEFONTE REPUBLICAN and all material thereto belonging has been removed to the rooms in the Bush House, formerly occupied by the Bellefonte Press Co.

——For the benefit of Burnside & Thomas' numerous customers we would announce that their Store will be closed on Good Friday, April 11. They attend to no business on that day.

——A local editor of many years experience has declared that the man is yet unborn who could write a local item and be perfectly sure that nobody would be offended. People are so sensative you know!

——By information gained at the Court House we find that there are in Centre county 62 licensed dram shops. 17 of these are in the Borough of Bellefonte. We call the attention of our citizens to the fact that all these licenses expire on the 8th day of April.

——Twenty building lots were bought by ten of our citizens on last Saturday. These lots adjoin the northern boundary of the borough and were formerly a part of Judge Linn's farm. They are finely located for building purposes and we expect to see some handsome residences there soon.

——It is rather remarkable that no person holding a policy in the "Equitable Life Insurance Company" has ever been known to complain, and the older the policy the better it is liked. Questions are asked and then every member understands his policy and is satisfied. John I. Rankin represents this company at Bellefonte, Pa.

——A colored man named Delige, entered the store of David Rhule, on Saturday night last, and, showing a want of decorum, was invited to leave, to which he objected, and Mr. Rhule put him out. It is said the intruder threw a stone into the store window, for which he was arrested and bound over to appear at the next court. Too much "benzine" the cause, in tapering off before the prohibitory law comes into force.

——There seems to be a misunderstanding as to the change to be effected by the law passed this winter, in relation to prepayment of postage. The only change that effects county newspapers, is that the papers that have heretofore circulated free of postage in the county where they were published, will after June 30th, be subjected to postage, to be paid by subscribers. Exchanges will also be required to be charged with postage to be paid by the receiver.

——At the regular meeting of the Murdoch Literary Society last Monday evening a week, the following officers were elected for the ensuing term of three months:

President—J. L. Spangler,
Vice President—Nathaniel Beck,
Secretary—Wm. B. Rankin,
Assistant Secretary—Robert McClelland,
Treasurer—Charles F. Cook,
Librarian—C. Y. Hoffer,
Trustees—J. L. Spangler, D. F. Fortney and James Schofield.
Editors of the "Pioneer"—D. F. Fortney and L. O. Meek.

J. N. G., Sect'y.

——TESTIMONIAL.—John I. Rankin, Agent: We the undersigned policy-holders in the "Equitable Life Assurance Society" would say we believe it to be one of the very best Co's. in the country, and would heartily recommend it to those desiring safe Insurance.

——The management of the Agricultural College has adopted a new uniform for its students. It is about the style worn by the West Point Cadets and is very handsome and becoming.

The large ingathering of students at the commencment of the spring session reflects great credit on the new administration. Two military companies have been formed, one of infantry and the other, artillery. These companies receive regular drills in all the branches of military science. Guards are posted every night in and around the college building to insure good order and safety.

Everything in and about the college betokens a healthy and prosperous career that will make it an honor to the county and State. President Calder is a practical, successful and talented man of broad views and is deeply impressed with the importance and responsibility of his position.

Students are required to learn all that the institution teaches in regard to agriculture. The faculty is composed of men eminent in their several callings and we doubt if there is an institution in the land better endowed with the talent and material appliances necessary for giving the youth of our country a substantial, practical education and a taste for refined rural life. Certain it is that no agricultural college in the country carries out more carefully and successfull the true meaning and import of the act of Congress that established them.

——Chief Runkle came across Jas. Washington, colored, who was on a "bust," about 8 o'clock on Monday last, on "strychnine corner." James didn't seem to know whether he was outside of the whiskey or the whiskey outside of him. In order to bring him to his better senses, the chief gave him a pressing invitation to take quarters in the white building in rear of the Court House. James did not respond cheerfully, having been there before, and showing some disposition to resist, another colored individual named Miller, one of Hon. P. G. Meek's constituents, not being one of our best law-abiding citizens, was disposed to make war on the Chief; but Sheriff Shaffer being near by, went for the "heathen Chinee," who took to his heels, and the Sheriff being rather weighty, the fleet-footed darkey soon distanced him. By this time officer Fannon rode up, and noticing the melee, dismounted and joined in the chase, and succeeded in capturing the villain. Fannon being a little careless, the darkey watched his chance and played him the slip. This brought about a second race. By this time Fannon had his blood up to Irish heat, and pursued the darkey with more vigor than ever, and with the aid of a citizen captured the would-be runaway, who is now boarding with Sheriff Shaffer. These young rascals should be taught a lesson by the proper authorities, which will break up the nuisance of disorderly conduct on the streets.

PERSONAL.—Hon. John H. Orvis returned home on last Saturday, looking bright and precocious as a new dollar bill.

Hon. Andrew G. Curtin was registered at the Bush House on last Friday. He looks very much better than at any time since he came from Russia. He will soon remove to his own splendid residence on High Street. We understand that the honored ex-governor has resolved to spend the remainder of his useful and busy lifetime in this, his native town. We hope it is true.

We had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Ed. Mackey of the Lock Haven National Bank on Saturday. He is the same accomplished, genial gentleman, only his frosted beard betrays time changes.

We are under obligations to Hon. Joseph F. Quay of Clinton County for valuable papers sent us.

——A challenge to the teachers of Spring Township: Believing that my school can answer more questions correctly in the rudiments of music—can read music and sing better, than any school in this township, I hereby challenge your schools to compete with mine on the night of the 15th of April. Should any of you feel able to accept this challenge, please reply in the next issue of the REPUBLICAN or Watchman.

Respectfully,
G. P. GENTZEL,
Teacher of Nittany School.

——Col. D. G. Bush, the most enterprising and wide-awake man in this section, returned from North Carolina on last Thursday. If he should happen to leave this place and invest his money elsewhere, perhaps he would be appreciated as he deserves to be. With a dozen more such men as Col. Bush, Bellefonte would soon double its population.

——The "Equitable" takes the lead of all other Life Insurance companies in the point of business. Call and see John I. Rankin, their agent, before closing an application with any other company.

——Joe. W. Furey, has ceased his tri-weekly visits to Bellefonte having removed his family to Williamsport.

——And now Esquire Caldwell, of Tyrone, is married. Our express agent, in this place, will have to report at headquarters once a week.

——Plenty of loafers about town. Go to work, you lazy rascals! Idleness is mother of more crime and misery than all other causes ever thought of.

——The little Minnequa job cost Peter Herdic sixteen thousand dollars and he won't get any interest on the money for some little time.

——Butter is scarce. There is wealth in waiting for the individual who will supply the market with a good, fresh quality of that delectable article.

——Our public schools are entitled to a holiday on the 11th of this month which is good Friday. So are bank officials or any other man that wants a holiday and can afford it.

——The heavy rains of last week caused the boom in Meyer's mill dam, south of Aaronsburg, to break, by which several hundred logs, belonging to Messrs. Meyer and Hoffer, went adrift.

——Twelve spans of the Lock Haven boom were carried off by the high water and press of logs on last Monday night. Part of the Linden boom has also been carried away. The river is very high at this writing.

——A resident of Snow Shoe township, named Wilson Walker, was drowned on last Friday, while working on a log jam in the Big run. His body was not found for some time after the sad occurrence. He is spoken of as an industrious, hard-working, honest man.

——During the past forthnight pigeons and wild ducks have been migrating northward in large flocks, the former stoping in the various cornfields while the latter "go for" Spring creek and partake of cooling beverages to quench thrist. Every gun from the gentleman's fixed ammunition, double barreled sporting gun, to the old rusty musket, has been brought into active service and every one who has conceit enough, has been trying to compete with the more experienced sportsmen, in his endeavors to bag the coveted game. Malin, Hicks and Gordon were quite lucky in baging quite a number of pigeons, which they shot on the Barnhart farm in Spring township. While these lucky sportsman were on their successful tour, our friend Grice of the Bush House being one of the brag shots made a reconnoisance along Spring creek for ducks. Bang! Whang!! Sho-Whang!!! was the sound that startled the good citizens near the Spring commonly called the "Goosepond." What on earth could it be? Some thought it the approaching sounds of an earth quake, while others conjectured that the park artillery had arrived and the park commissioners were experimenting, when lo! the voice of a female was heard: "You, you! you naughty fellow, you shot my duck. At this point Mrs. Ickoff made her appearance, Grice turned pale, "O! O!! Mis—Mrs. Ickoff, I really thought the do—dook—duck really was wild. It has wings and flew like a wild duck. I am so nervous Mrs. I.—but I will pay you for it, how much is it? "Well," says Mrs. I, "I had just twelve ducks and a drake, they were all such nice toppy ducks, just twelve eggs a day, now you have spoiled my dozen." "Goodness gracious, Mrs. Ickoff, how much is the bill? I am so nervous," says Grice, "here I pay you fifty cents, you keep the duck, but don't tell any body for I feel pale." If there is any body in town who wants his head punched, just say "ducks" to Grice.

SUGGESTIONS TO SABBATH SCHOOLS IN CENTRE COUNTY.—One hundred Sabbath Schools in Centre County have been closed during the winter months. Within the next few weeks, they will resume operations. A few suggestions, at this time may not be without advantage to those who will have those schools in charge.

Secure as large attendance as possible at the first meeting for reorganization.

Give public notices at least two weeks beforehand.

In the meantime, invite personally as many as you can to be present at the meeting and to take part in the work to be done.

First of all, ask the blessing of God upon the undertaking.

If you have a preacher, ask him to preach a Sabbath school sermon previous to the opening of the school and as often as he can thereafter.

For superintendent, appoint the man or woman best fitted to fill that office.

Choose no one merely because he belongs to a certain denomination.

Qualification is the thing to be considered rather than a nominal profession.

Give the school a definite name, either union or denominational.

If it is called "union," make it consistently so. Remember there is no such thing as a Presbyterian or a Methodist or a Lutheran union Sunday school. In an undenominational on union school, simple justice requires that no book or paper or other publications of a denominational character should be introduced except by consent of all concerned. Attention to this will often save serious trouble.

Elect a faithful person for secretary and provide him with a minute book with blanks for one session a Sabbath. Such a book can be had for 35 or 50 cents. A diligent use of it will greatly serve the interests of the school.

Do not form too many classes.

It is better to employ a few competent teachers for large classes than to have so many classes that some of them will be in charge of persons who are not qualified to teach.

At another time, I may give a few hints concerning Sunday school management.

On receipt of 10 cents to cover costs, I will send to any address, the Sunday School Monitor, containing practical suggestions for Sunday school workers; together with a copy of One Lesson for All, setting forth the advantages of the international uniform lessons. New union or needy mission schools that can not sufficiently supply themselves with books and papers can be aided to a limited extent.

R. CHITTENDEN,
Miss'y Am. S. S. Union.

——New business done by the "Equitable Life" in 1872—$51,000,000—NO COMPANY reaching it within $16,000,000.

THE PUREST AND SWEETEST COD-LIVER OIL is Hazard & Caswell's, made on the sea shore, from fresh, selected livers, by CASWELL, HAZARD & Co., New-York. 3-4t

BUSINESS NOTICES.

BEING attracted by the handsome and tasty show-windows of the large DRY GOODS establishment of Messrs Loeb, May & Loeb on Allegheny street, we ventured in, and were met by the genial Simon Loeb who, with his blandest and most winning ways, welcomed us to a seat behind the cashier's desk where we found the senior member of the firm, Mr. Adolph Loeb, busy as usual. His shoulders are not very broad but upon them rest all the cares and responsibilities of the large establishment over which he presides. He is abundantly equal to the emergency and, young as he is, his judgment in regard to all matters of business is a peculiar gift and commands, as will as receives, the well merited respect of our business community. Of course he had leisure to show us around among the attractions. What a huge pile of carpets of every color, design and price, suitable for all styles of living from a cottage to palace! Then the piles of dress and fancy goods, of endless varieties, shades, paterns colors and figures. It was a bewildering maze to us, but, we suppose, a perfect elysium for the ladies. We took particular notice of their large stock of gloves, the largest and best selected stock ever brought to Bellefonte. We cannot particularize futher, but their house is the acknowledged Emporium and buyers cannot do better than to go the firm of Loeb, May and Loeb for any thing they want. They have it and will sell it for the very lowest cash price.

MARRIED.

By Rev U. S. Condit, March 26, at the residence of the bride's brother near Zion, Mr. Oscar F Smith of Cleveland, O., formerly of Rochester, N. Y., to Miss Phoebe R. McKean.

At Jacksonville, April 4, of consumption, Mrs. Ann Margaret, wife of E. Erily, aged 36 years and three months.

At Lock Haven, Charles, infant son of A. E. and Emiline Geary. The remains were taken to Hublersburg.
